Russians Advance 17 Miles on Don As Nazis Retreat

Reds Score Important
Gains above Industrial Center

London Reports 1,335,-
000 Germans Demoralized in Two Months

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Jan. 20 (AP)—The Red army, driving deeply into the Ukraine, gained seventeen miles in the sweep toward Kharkov, and farther south reached a point only forty-five miles above Voroshilovgrad. Donets river industrial center, a special communique announced tonight.

The Russians now have rolled back the Germans to an area where the resilient Red army itself had retreated last summer when the big Nazi drive began.

(The midnight Soviet communique heard by the Soviet Monitor in London said the Russians had captured Mityukinskaya, only twenty-two air line miles east of Voroshilovgrad, a junction on a network of railways that winds down to Rostov. Thus the Russians not only were closing in on the important Nazi base of Rostov from three sides, but might aim to sweep around it to anchor their flying columns on the sea of Azov behind it.)

Reds Near Rail Junction
In the Caucasus the Russians now were near Salsk, big rail junction 100 miles below Rostov.

British military observers said the Russians in two months had rendered ineffective a total of 89 Axis divisions, representing the demoralization of some 1,335,000 enemy troops if they were at full divisional strength.

The southern arm of the Russian sweep toward Kharkov captured Byelokurakina, 115 miles southeast of the big industrial center. A northern army is fighting within seventy-nine miles of the city from the east.

Byelokurakina was taken by Soviet troops advancing seventeen miles from Novo-Pskov. Farther south another column took Byelovodsk, forty-five miles above Voroshilovgrad. Other Russian units were threatening Voroshilovgrad in a drive down the railway from Millerovo.

The Northern army is fighting beyond the Urazovo area on the Voronezh-Kupiansk-Kharkov railway. Seventy miles northeast of this Russian spearhead the Red army finally smashed a two-day drive down the railway from Millerovo.

Brown Predicts Rise in Prices

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Prestis Brown, the nation's new price administrator, predicted today a "slow, well ordered" rise in prices. "I don't believe we can hold prices at a flat level," Brown told a press conference shortly after he had taken the oath of office, succeeding Leon Henderson, who resigned.

Brown, former senator from Michigan, said he felt this country had done a much better job of keeping down prices than in the last world war.

Since September 1, 1939, he said, there has been an overall increase of thirty-nine per cent, much of it before price regulation, compared with an increase of 110 per cent for the entire first period.

For the most part, Brown declined to comment on policy or personnel matters, explaining that it would take him ten days to two weeks to become familiar with these questions.

Hope for More Gasoline in East

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Smiling Prestis M. Brown took over price control and rationing administration from Leon Henderson today, and immediately held out some hope for more liberal gasoline ration this summer, better fuel oil supply for next winter, and more sympathetic regulation all around.

An hour after he took the oath of office, Brown went before a press conference to plead for understanding from the public.

Makes No Promises
Brown made no promises, saying he wanted a couple of weeks to study his task, but at every step he indicated hope for relaxation of restrictions and commented:

Fuel Shortage In Maryland Is Reported Serious

O'Connor and Jackson Issue
Statement Urging Conservation

[By The Associated Press]
Amid ever-growing indications that the fuel shortage in Maryland might turn from acute to critical at any time, Governor O'Connor and Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore issued a joint statement Wednesday urging Marylanders to take all possible steps to conserve fuel of all kinds.

Baltimore and the surrounding area is experiencing the worst shortage, but all sections of the state reported a drop in fuel stocks.

Governor O'Connor issued a statement which said, in part:

"Representatives of the federal petroleum co-ordinator, Harold L. Ickes, conferred with me in Annapolis regarding the fuel oil and coal situation.

Situation Still Acute

"The federal representatives emphasized that the heating situation along the Atlantic seaboard is still most acute.

"Furthermore, they stated that it had not improved during recent days, and in certain localities had become increasingly desperate.

"I asked them whether they would favor most drastic action on our part to the end that non-essential establishments be put on a five-day week basis.

"The federal officials declared that they did not think such a step was required at this time. They did make certain recommendations. Because Mayor Jackson and I have been working in close co-operation and in thorough agreement in this matter, we have agreed to issue a joint statement which is now being announced."

The governor's and Jackson's statement, in part, requested consumers, except war industries:

Appeal to Public

1. To purchase coal only for absolute needs, and in the case of domestic users, only small quantities at a time.

2. To convert from oil to coal

Chile Breaks Off Relations with 3 Axis Powers

President Rios Given Approval of Senate by Vote
of 30-10

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 20 (AP)—As a contribution to hemispheric solidarity and long after the original indignation over Axis attacks on Chilean shipping had cooled, Chile broke off diplomatic relations today with Germany, Japan and Italy and began the concentration of Axis nationals.

President Juan Antonio Rios last night obtained the supporting approval of the Senate, by a thirty to ten vote, then signed the decree to oust the Axis diplomats, who were to be handed their passports later in the day.

It was not known immediately whether the diplomats would remain in Chile until an exchange could be arranged or whether they would be transferred to Argentina, which now is the only American nation maintaining diplomatic relations with the Axis.

President Rios was scheduled to tell his nation of the break at a broadcast tonight.

All Axis nationals meanwhile were being rounded up and placed under guard.

Foreign Minister Joaquin Fernandez called in the American Diplomatic Corps to make the announcement.

The Brazilian ambassador, Samuel Souza de Leao, Gracie, whose country is the only South American belligerent, said upon leaving the foreign office:

"This decision places Chile in the democratic front."

Bolivian Ambassador Alberto Ostria Gutierrez, who as foreign minister expelled Axis diplomats from his country, said the break "unites us more than ever."

United States and Great Britain To Do Still Better Soon

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—The United States and the United Kingdom have sent 5,800 tanks and 4,600 planes to Russia, the Lend-Lease administration reported today that a promise that aid to the Soviet "will grow still more in 1943."

Administrator Edward R. Stettinius Jr. said that as of Jan. 1 more than 3,200 tanks and almost 2,600 planes had gone from the United States, and 2,600 tanks and more than 2,000 planes from the United Kingdom.

Announcing "important progress" last year in supplying the Soviet, Stettinius declared:

"The people of the Soviet Union have so far waged a magnificent battle against the Nazis principally with their own arms. But Lend-Lease aid to Russia is growing to a sizable proportion. It will grow still more in 1943."

30 London School Children Killed By Nazi Bombers

Sixty-three More and Three Teachers Believed
Dead in Ruins

By LEO BRANHAM

LONDON, Jan. 20 (AP)—German rooftop raiders killed at least thirty school children and buried thirty to sixty-three more and three teachers beyond hope of life under tons of debris in a swift but relatively small-scale attack on London at noon today. It was the worst blow suffered by London schools since the blitz attacks began.

Only six raiders eluded London's defenses and the school, in the heart of a residential section, was smashed into rubble.

There wasn't a chance that the children and teachers buried in the ruins were alive, for they had been chattering gaily at luncheon on the first floor, but 200 rescue workers kept digging for them.

Only eleven children and one teacher in the building emerged alive. Thirty bodies of children from six to fourteen years of age had been recovered.

The known victims besides the children in the one building were ten children and six women killed by a bomb which smashed three London houses, and six children and three women killed when a bomb passed through the top of a cafe and across a street into a row of houses.

In Southern England, where the raiders also delivered destruction, one elderly man died of shock in a southeast coastal town where forty to sixty planes appeared in two waves, but dropped no bombs.

Probably thirty heavily escorted raiders were bound for London and in all, at least thirteen Focke-Wulf 190s and Messerschmitt 109 fighters-bombers were shot down by RAF fighters.

Mother of Two Children Slain

FREDERICK, Md., Jan. 20 (AP)—Laura J. Norwood, 39-year-old mother of two children, was shot and killed in her farm home at Price's Distillery, in Frederick county, today.

Several hours later state police surrounded a tobacco barn near the Frederick-Montgomery county line and arrested a negro found inside. He was taken to the Frederick jail, where authorities questioned him.

State Police Sergeant M. M. Puckett said Mrs. Norwood died almost instantly from a rifle shot in the body.

Sergeant Puckett said the rifle was in the possession of authorities. Mrs. Norwood's body was found by her husband, Charles M. Norwood, and her son, who were elsewhere on the farm when the shooting occurred, Puckett said.

Engine Explosion Kills 3 Trainmen

WOODSTOCK, Md., Jan. 20 (AP)—Letting go with a terrific blast heard for miles around, the boiler of an engine of a 100-car Baltimore and Ohio railroad freight exploded near here today, killing three members of the train crew.

The dead trainmen, all Baltimoreans, were Hugh Herring, engineer; J. H. Cropper, fireman, and the head brakeman, identified only as M. Boylan.

The explosion ripped the boiler from the engine frame and hurled it 400 feet ahead of the moving freight. The train came to a halt and none of the cars, nor the engine itself, was derailed.

Newspaper Asks Readers Not To Buy
It and Requests Less Advertising

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (AP)—Under the slogan, "Don't buy a Newspaper," the New York Daily News tonight asked its patrons to do that in order to help it conserve its paper supply.

The publication, devoting its editorial space to the matter, also announced it soon would increase its advertising rates about ten per cent, asked its advertisers to tailor their space requirements, and it would immediately increase the price of the Sunday paper in Canada to ten cents. The ten-cent Sunday paper also is contemplated for points west of the Mississippi river.

To date, the statement said, the paper was exceeding its allotment of newspaper paper, fixed by the government.

"If our readers will buy fewer copies and borrow more, that will help some," the statement read.

It then went on to tell of the other plans for discouraging sales and advertising space purchasing and said it might be necessary to increase the cost of each copy to ten cents on Sundays in suburban New York. It continued:

"None of this is any fun. After the war, when we're rocking along to new heights of social security under the Beveridge plan and the four freedoms, we hope to put the Sunday paper back to five cents all over this continent, and to print all the advertising we can get."

Edward J. Flynn Called Perjurer At Senate Quiz

Lied in His Testimony, Sidney Baron Says on Witness Stand

By WILLIAM T. PEACOCK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—An opponent's cry of "perjury" today capped Edward J. Flynn's denial of wrongdoing, and the Senate Foreign Relations committee decided to get the views of Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia and other New York officials on Flynn's fitness to be minister to Australia.

Flynn, chain-smoking cigarettes, went over one by one the charges leveled by Republicans contending he is unfit for the Australian post, and branded them all political in origin and absolutely false in their implications.

Calls Flynn Perjurer

Then Sidney Baron, New Yorker who said he is secretary of the Committee to Reopen the Flynn Case, called Flynn's entire testimony "perjury" and gave the names of more than twenty persons who he declared, would prove that the former Democratic chairman lied on point after point of his sworn testimony.

Ending the day's hearing, the committee announced after a brief executive session:

That the committee would resume hearings Friday and, meantime, would invite testimony at that time from Mayor La Guardia; Samuel Foley, district attorney for the Bronx; William B. Herlands, commissioner of investigation in the Bronx; Robert Moran, former Bronx commissioner of public works; Paul J. Kern, former New York Civil Service commissioner, and Daniel Daily, foreman of the grand jury which investigated use of city-owned materials to pave a courtyard at Flynn's Putnam county (N. Y.) estate.

Gives 20 Names

Baron, a Brooklyn publicity man, had asked that these witnesses be called. Baron also gave the Senate group the names of some twenty other persons he said should be invited to testify and who, he contended, would prove that Flynn had lied.

A dapper, black-moustached young man, Baron said the group he represented was originally organized to seek a reopening of the Flynn case (the grand jury absolving Flynn of any wrong-doing in connection with it).

Baron said he came before the committee as an "ordinary citizen" (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

MINERS LAUNCH BACK-TO-WORK MOVEMENT IN HARD COAL AREA

Thousands Abandon Strike, but 9,000 Remain Idle in Spite of Message from Roosevelt

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Jan. 20 (AP)—Stomping, shouting miners launched a new back-to-work movement in Pennsylvania's strike-bound hard coal fields tonight.

Cries of "back to work boys" rang through union halls as nearly three thousand workers voted to comply with President Roosevelt's order that they end their three-week-old unauthorized walkout by noon tomorrow.

Throwing parliamentary order to the winds, the 1,800 employees of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company's Prospect-Henry colliery didn't even bother to take a formal vote. In a five-minute session they yelled unanimously approving when one worker called out:

"What do we want a meeting for? Let's go back to work!"

First To Obey Roosevelt

They were the first to make such a decision since Mr. Roosevelt issued his ultimatum yesterday and warned that he would "take the necessary steps" unless the miners obeyed.

More formal but just as determined, the miners were told by Dave Cummings, president of the local for twenty years:

"You boys should be like prize fighters. When one loses he accepts the decision. We all go back to work tomorrow."

Vote To Remain Out

Earlier, however, one small local, the Exeter of the Payne Coal Company, with 800 members, decided to remain out. Altogether about 9,000 still were idle.

No mention was made at the meetings of the Lance and Prospect-Henry collieries of their demands—that a fifty-cents a month increase in union dues be rescinded and that they be granted a flat wage increase of $2 a day.

The voting followed these other developments:

Von Arnim Given Command of All Tunisia Forces

Hitler Takes Action To End
Feud between Axis
Generals

LONDON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim, disclosed today as commander of the German forces in Tunisia, was chosen for the job by Fuehrer Adolf Hitler as a solution of a growing conflict between his predecessor, Gen. Walther Nehring, nominally in charge of all Axis African operations, and Marshal Erwin Rommel, commander of the Africa Corps.

As von Arnim directed a strong tank attack designed to aid Rommel's retreat from Tripoli, he was known as a brilliant offensive tactician, but with no experience in defensive operations of the type lately conducted by Nehring in Tunisia and by the retreating Rommel.

British Report Sinking 14
Axis Vessels in Mediterranean

By ALFRED E. WALL

LONDON, Jan. 20 (AP)—The Fighting French swarming northward from equatorial Africa have joined forces with the British Eighth army closing on Tripoli, it was announced tonight, while the British reported sinking fourteen Axis vessels in the Mediterranean in the first three days of this week.

These French troops swept up from the Lake Chad area over deserts and mountains, conquering the Italian Fezzan, and now "are continuing their advance northward and have established contact with the British Eighth army," a communique from Brig. Gen. Le Clerc's headquarters announced.

Attack Axis Army

"These forces are brilliantly taking part with their British allies in the advance on Tripoli. They are attacking on the left of the Eighth army moving northward," said the war bulletin broadcast by the fighting French radio at Brazzaville.

The juncture was announced shortly after the British had reported sinking fourteen Axis ships in the central Mediterranean in the first three days of this week, and as twin British columns pounding toward Tripoli were reported within forty and sixty miles of the bomb-battered capital of Mussolini's vanishing Libyan empire.

The new threat from this French thrust increased the probability that field marshal Erwin Rommel would fight only a delaying action at Tripoli, instead of making a final stand there.

The French column had moved up under Colonel Ingold, the field commander under Le Clerc. Its new advance was announced by the authoritative French radio station at Brazzaville, and not the "Radio Tunis" used as a cloak by an Axis broadcasting station.

Sinks Three Axis Ships

A triumphant communique by the admiralty tonight disclosed that a pack of destroyers, six British and one Greek, sank these vessels on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights without damage or loss: A 3,000-ton supply ship, apparently carrying ammunition which blew up south of Sardinia.

Ten ships of varying sizes, off Tunisia.

3 Axis Nations Sign New Pact

[By The Associated Press]

A Berlin radio broadcast reported by the Associated Press tonight said that Germany, Japan, and Italy had signed an economic cooperation pact yesterday to utilize, "each in his own economic sphere," their resources for "totalitarian warfare against common enemies," and also as the basis for permanent collaboration "after a victorious termination of the war."

The agreement, to run concurrently with the 10-year military assistance pact of Sept. 27, 1940, was signed at Adolf Hitler's headquarters by Nazi foreign minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and the Japanese ambassador, Hiroshi Oshima, the broadcast said.

An identical pact was signed in Rome by Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and the Japanese Charge D'Affaires, Shunichi Kase.

1,032 Japanese Killed in Five Days of Warfare on Guadalcanal

By HAMILTON W. FARON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—American troops, relentlessly pressing a campaign to eliminate enemy forces on Guadalcanal, killed 1,032 Japanese in five days of jungle warfare, the navy reported today.

In patrol skirmishes and in comparatively large scale engagements, they advanced on the Japanese and wiped out group after group in the five days ending January 17.

Many of the engagements were within a short distance of Henderson air field, base for American planes which have been bombing enemy positions on other islands and attacking shipping in the Solomons area.

One was an encounter in which American troops moved steadily forward, advanced between 3,000 and 4,000 yards to throw back the Japanese despite "stiff enemy resistance" last Friday.

Again on the next day the ground forces forged ahead, with the enemy offering determined resistance from trenches and ambushes in the jungles.

Other skirmishes took American troops into action against pockets of enemy resistance—small groups of Japanese holding positions from which they could harass American movements. In one day of such actions the navy reported that on Saturday 150 Japanese were killed, a number taken prisoner and a quantity of equipment captured.

The navy told also today of con-

Hitler Alarmed By Red Advance, Simpson Asserts

Commentator Sees Possible Break in German Morale

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

With Russian forces reported almost as close to Kharkov in the upper Don region as they are to Rostov on the lower Don approaches, apprehension is rising in Berlin. This anxiety is reflected by Nazi military and other commentators whose words are recorded by British and American listening posts.

However misleading the German war bulletins from Russia continue to be, it cannot be doubted that an attempt is being made on the home front to prepare the German public for worse news than it heard last winter. Russian armies which Hitler boasted had his people had been smashed beyond recovery are now being described to German listeners as bigger, better armed, better led and more aggressive than ever.

May Weaken Nazi Morale

Just what this conflict between Nazi military and civil authority means to the state of German morale is unfathomable at this distance. It marks so sharp an about-face in German propaganda technique, however, that it might be an important clue to what is actually going on behind the Nazi lines.

The theme of the broadcast from Berlin and other German cities is that Germans must again tighten their belts, increase their war effort, match the courage and suffering of the armies in Russia and hang on to the bitter end.

Here and there hints creep in that greater Axis retreats in Russia than marked the dark hours of last winter may be necessary. There is little effort either by German front propagandists or by German prisoners interviewed by American news writers in Russia to conceal another costly Hitler underestimate of Russian morale and fighting resources.

New Threat to Germans

In the upper Don theater, below the Voronezh bulge, a new and critical threat to the whole southern end of the German battle line appears to be developing. The Russian offensive there seems to have caught the foe napping.

The Nazi high command obviously did not expect a heavy blow there; it left defense of that critical front largely to secondary Allied troops. German divisions on the now broken line below Voronezh must have been withdrawn southward to bolster the narrowing Rostov defense arc.

Whether Kharkov, great Ukrainian steel center, is the Russian objective is not yet clear. Its recapture would be of tremendous tactical, strategic and psychological value to the Russians.

Italian press reports depict the Russian drive below the Voronezh hinge as a major offensive by itself, not merely a northward extension of the Don-Caucasus battle front. It is aimed not at Kharkov but at severing the network of railroads in the Donets valley and the Dnieper, it would justify that appraisal. Success could close a vast Russian trap on the foe than any yet developed or threatened.

plan to consolidate the Africa Corps with the Tunisian Axis forces for a final Axis stand had met the difficulty that Rommel, superior in rank, had refused to serve under Nehring.

(Nehring was reported equally determined not to serve under Rommel whom he is said to have called "merely a lucky tactician.")

Von Arnim, a professional soldier and son and grandson of German army generals, is typical of the Junkers military caste.

A staff officer in the first World War, he joined the present conflict as a major, was promoted to the rank of chief of staff of a tank division and fought in Poland, on the western front and in Russia, where he was severely wounded.

He was promoted to his present rank in October, 1942, when, at the age of 52, he became commander of the "Halprin" division, so called from the shape of its divisional insignia.

porter asked about the fairness of a tentative rule that would permit people who eat in restaurants to escape food rationing, he commented:

"I'm puzzled about that too. It's a real loophole. I'm going to look into that."

He said "I feel as bad as you do" about gasoline rationing, and expressed belief that barge line, pipeline and other new means of transportation might permit some easing or driving rules by next summer. He promised specifically to look into the fuel oil supply situation with the intention of making more home heating fuel available by next winter. He suggested it was too late to do much about this winter's rations.

The 53-year-old administrator took the oath of office from Justice William O. Douglas, with Mrs. Brown and small son, Paul, looking on.

Latest Developments On Principal Fronts

(By The Associated Press)

Rampant Russian armies gain additional seventeen miles in sweep toward Kharkov, further compressing huge Nazi units in northwestern Caucasus in drive on German anchor base on Rostov. Reds in two months badly maul, partly destroy eighty-nine Axis divisions, sixty of them German. At full strength this would represent demoralization of 1,335,000 enemy troops.

United States troops, relentlessly pressing campaign to eliminate enemy forces on Guadalcanal, kill 1,032 Japanese in five days of fighting ending Jan. 17. Many engagements fought within short distance of Henderson field.

Chile breaks off diplomatic relations with Germany, Japan and Italy. Chilean government begins concentration of Axis nationals.

Tokyo radio announces on eve of scheduled reconvening of Japanese diet (Parliament) that Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo is ill and resumption of Parliament session has been postponed until Jan. 27. Chinese political observers see "indication of increasing crisis in Japanese government."

British announce sinking of fourteen enemy ships in central Mediterranean in most extensive sweep of those waters in months. Blow apparently timed to support renewed drive on Tripoli, which has carried Eighth army to within sixty miles of bombed and burning city.

British Eighth army pushes on toward Tripoli while Germans launch tank attack in central Tunisia apparently to divert Allied strength and insure open road by which Marshal Rommel could retreat into Tunisia and join forces with German Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim.

Fighting French swarming northward from equatorial Africa join forces with British Eighth army closing on Tripoli. French troops sweep up from Lake Chad area, conquering Italian Fezzan, and continue advance northward, attacking on left of British Eighth army.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—(P)—Two air raid alarms sounded in London tonight, the second coming at about 11 p. m. No gunfire or planes were heard during the first brief alert.

Night raiders dropped incendiaries in a residential area of a southeast coastal town and started a small number of fires which were quickly put out.

No casualties were reported but there was considerable property damage.

At another part of the southeast coast planes fled inland and heavy gunfire was heard.

and because he believed the American people deserved a better minister to Australia than Flynn.

Concerning most of the charges raised against Flynn, Baron had no direct personal knowledge and this led him into a clash with Chairman Connally (D-Tex) of the Senate committee.

Connally frequently interrupted to inquire whether Baron was presenting "hearsay," something he had read in the newspapers, or was testifying of his own knowledge.

Baron Shows Anger

Exasperated, Baron finally declared Connally was acting as "the defense attorney" and asked if he wasn't "entitled to a little courtesy."

"The chairman has been courteous to you and indulgent to you," Connally began.

"You have not been courteous, you have interrupted—" Baron interposed.

"Now just a minute," Connally stopped him. "I have been courteous and I am willing to overlook these insults if you will be courteous."

Most of the proposed witnesses Baron asked he called were workmen who paved the courtyard at Flynn's estate. He said their testimony would prove:

A. That city employees and city materials were used to pave the courtyard.

B. That Edward J. Flynn knew about it all the time.

Flynn Paid for Blocks

Flynn had testified he knew nothing of the use of city materials and city employees until the job was finished, and had promptly paid the costs of about $750. Actually, he declared, "this so-called Belgian courtyard" was an automobile parking plot.

Flynn's law partner, Monroe Goldwater, in supporting testimony said the Democratic chairman was "astounded, surprised, aggravated and distressed" and that he "naturally swore" when he learned the true story of the paving job.

Goldwater also supported Flynn's statement that he had nothing to do with his law firm's retention by Serge Rubinstein. Senator Bridges (R-NH) has charged Rubinstein had Japanese interests.

Sunday Closing Is Voted for Harford County

House of Delegates Also Passes Seven Other Measures

By JOHN F. CHANDLER

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 20.—(P)—The House of Delegates, grinding through its legislative calendar today in short order, passed eight bills—including the Harford county Sunday closing measure—without a voice of protest or dissenting vote, then followed the Senate in adjournment until tomorrow.

With exception of the Harford liquor bill, most of the measures acted upon in the House were minor repeals of obsolete or unnecessary laws which had been introduced by the Legislative Council.

The Senate required only fourteen minutes to hear favorable reports on three minor bills, while five new ones were introduced in the brief session.

Protect Maryland Soldiers

Two measures offered by Senator Stephen P. Campbell, Jr. (D-Balto) were designed to protect the jobs of state employees returning from active service with the armed forces, and to extend unemployment compensation benefits to returning soldiers and sailors.

Harford county now permits sale of intoxicating beverages on Sundays only between the hours of noon and 8 p. m. The Sunday closing bill, sponsored by Delegate Earle R. Burkins, Democrat of Bel Air, was one of several measures dealing with liquor expected to come up this session.

Another House bill passed would reduce the bond required of state athletic commissioners from $10,000 to $5,000. There are three athletic commissioners, the chairman receiving $1,500 a year, and members, $1,200.

Nine New Bills Submitted

Among nine new bills submitted in the House was one by the Anne Arundel county delegation which would require that the one and one-half cent lateral road gasoline tax fund be distributed to counties and the state every two years on the basis of public mileage.

Legislators explained that the present distribution was based on mileage and traffic conditions twenty or more years ago, and did not provide an equitable portion of such funds on modern heavily-traveled roads.

Delegate Charles M. See (R-Allegany) introduced a bill which would require bonding companies to explain, upon demand, within thirty days why any applicant had been refused a bond.

See Offers Bond Bill

"This bill seeks to correct an injustice," See explained, "because bonding companies don't advise persons why they have been turned down, when in fact they may have been refused on some error or technicality for which they were not to blame."

"And, once you are rejected, it is very difficult to get any company to sign your bond because applicants are asked if they have ever been turned down before."

"Refusal might be based on false information, prejudice, a mistake in identity, or many other reasons."

Any firm, officer or agent violating provisions would be liable for a fine of not more than $100 for each offense.

eration you have had?" Glesler asked.

"Yes, sir," she answered, and replied, to another question, that a particular man was involved.

"Did you not request the district attorney's office not to prosecute that man?" "Yes sir."

"And did they not promise you that they would not prosecute that man if you would testify in this case?" "No sir."

"They indicated that they would not prosecute that man?" "They told me it would not be brought up."

Knew She Faced Charges

Miss Satterlee admitted she knew the operation was a criminal act, subjecting her to possible prosecution.

It was here that Deputy District Attorney Thomas Cochran offered to stipulate that the operation was an abortion, but asked the judge to instruct the jury that the testimony was being admitted not to establish the truth or falsity of the matters involved but only to establish the witness's state of mind. This Judge Leslie E. Still did.

Statutory rape involves a sexual act with a girl under the age of eighteen. Miss Satterlee has charged Flynn with intimacies on two occasions during a cruise to Santa Catalina Island aboard the actor's luxurious yacht. The third count against him was signed by Betty Hansen, seventeen year old former Lincoln, Neb. girl.

A motor launch, also off Tunisia. A small naval vessel carrying gasoline to the island of Lampedusa. Further, a British submarine chased an enemy supply ship for five hours and sent her down off the Tunisian coast. This same submarine also drove ashore two small supply ships, both burning.

The destruction of these ships swept "Mussolini's 'Mare Nostrum'" virtually clean from the Tunisian coast to Sardinia.

The navy has announced the destruction of twenty-three surface craft in the central Mediterranean since the first of the year.

No Opposition at Sea

The absence of opposition at sea was taken here to indicate there was little probability of the Axis attempting to evacuate its forces from Tripolitania and Tunisia.

A broadcast of the Morocco radio recorded here said that part of Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel's re-treating forces already is well to the west of Tripoli and moving rapidly toward the Tunisian frontier.

To the northwest, in Tunisia, the Axis tank forces pushed forward seven miles into French-held positions southwest of Pont Du Fahs in an apparent move to take some of the pressure off Marshal Rommel's route of retreat from Tripolitania.

In the relentless battle of supply at sea, the admiralty announced that thirteen enemy vessels were destroyed in the central part of the Mediterranean during the first three days of this week without loss or damage to the royal navy.

Ammunition Ship Explodes

Ten of the enemy ships were sent down off the Tunisian coast, and the biggest individual prize was a 3,000-tonner the explosion of which, the British said, indicated she was loaded with ammunition intended for Axis forces in Tunisia.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's troops advanced yesterday more than twenty-five miles along the coastal road to the Homs area, sixty miles east of Tripoli, while a companion spearhead of the Eighth army swept in on Tahrana, forty miles from Tripoli.

Reuters reported that the Axis radio station broadcasting under the false name of "Radio Brazzaville" had announced that British troops were in the suburbs of Tripoli, but there was no confirmation of this from any Allied source. London quarters said they had no information to show that the British were even as close as thirty miles to Tripoli, as reported in a Cairo broadcast last night.

Tahrana Not Defended

That Rommel was not defending Tahrana was clearly indicated, it was said, by the volume of transport moving to the west of that place.

Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc, the fighting French leader who has swept up from the Lake Chad area, announced that his troops under command of Col. Ingold "are attacking on the left flank of the British Eighth army to have advanced northward."

(This indicated that the fighting French might have made contact with the Eighth army.)

The Eighth army menacing Tripoli itself has gathered such momentum that observers here believed it would sweep through the city before Rommel could organize a real defense, then rush on to Tunisia to launch a simultaneous, all-out attack with the first army.

United States pilots with the Allied forces in Tunisia, who have blasted the enemy motor transport column along the coastal road west of Tripoli, observed Axis columns were moving in both east and west, indicating that Rommel was shuttling vehicles to speed removal of equipment, supplies and troops from Tripoli into Tunisia.

In the Pont Du Fahs area of Tunisia the German tank column under its new commander Gen. Von Arnim shoved forward along the road from Pont Du Fahs southwest toward Robaa, about twenty-eight miles away.

To the north of Pont Du Fahs, a spokesman at Allied headquarters in North Africa said, "every Axis soldier who has advanced to the west side of the road running between Bou Arada and Goubellat" has been cleared out.

Miners Launch

1. The executive committee of the United Mine Workers district 1, in which all of the strike-closed mines are located, warned that all strikers who defied the president's order would face "dishonorable expulsion forthwith" from the union. Under the union's closed shop contract with operators, an expelled member is barred from the mines.

Martin Appeals to Miners

2. Governor Edward Martin, at his first press conference since his inauguration yesterday, called on the miners "as loyal citizens" to end the strike and asserted that the state of Pennsylvania would do "everything we can to support the president of the United States."

3. John L. Lewis, UMW president, wrote President Roosevelt that "we shall continue in every way possible to work" to get the men back to work. His assurance was given in reply to a telegram yesterday in which the chief executive advised him of the ultimatum to the miners.

4. The shortage of coal continued to grow more acute. Wilkes-Barre itself, in the heart of the anthracite region, faced a shortage so serious that Edward Kane, Plymouth township school director, said schools there would have to close unless the strike ended promptly.

Navy To Announce Casualties Daily

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(P)—The navy announced today that effective immediately all casualties of the navy, marine corps and coast guard would be announced in a daily list instead of in periodical accumulations as heretofore.

Axis stand in encircled Ostrogozhsk. Two railway trains loaded with motor vehicles and other equipment fell along with the city.

Approach Key Position

In the Caucasus the Red army overran Proletarskaya, about twenty-three miles from Nazi-held Salsk, a key rail and air base 100 miles southeast of Rostov. It is from Salsk that the Germans have been flying in supplies to the twenty-two Nazi divisions slowly being throttled to death in the trap before Stalingrad.

Hendley said that very little coal had been reaching Baltimore since the start of the Pennsylvania mine strike.

Crisis in Baltimore

The fuel oil situation in Baltimore remained in the same hand-to-mouth state of supply it has been in for several weeks.

Poultrymen on the Eastern Shore said egg and poultry meat production would soon drop in that area unless they could obtain sufficient coal to heat brooders housed.

Annapolis dealers reported the coal shortage there was severe, but not critical.

One Annapolis dealer put it this way: "Our customers aren't getting what they want—but there's getting enough coal to keep warm."

Continued attacks against enemy shipping seeking to reinforce Japanese troops in the Solomons. Bombers flew 300 miles northwest to Shortland island and found a Japanese cargo vessel at anchor.

Two bombs struck the ship. It burst into flames and was burning when American planes returned to their base.

Two Japanese "Zeros" equipped with floats for operation on the water were shot down. One American fighter plane failed to return.

Jaycee Directors To Meet Tonight

The board of directors of the junior association of commerce will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock at Allegany Inn hotel, according to announcement made by James T. White, secretary. During the meeting the directors will listen to the nationwide broadcast of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Man Lacerates Hand

Raymond Beck, 40, 103 Decatur street, was treated in Allegany hospital at 12:30 p. m. yesterday for a laceration of his right hand, suffered while he was at work at the Queen City brewery. His hand was cut on a beer bottle.

3. To observe all rules and regulations relative to rationing, especially those regarding the pleasure-driving ban.

Arthur H. Hendley, secretary of the Baltimore Coal Exchange, said that there was a very small supply of coal in Baltimore and that operators were having difficulty in making deliveries because of a shortage of manpower.

Temperature Plunges To Nine above Zero, Lowest for January

Frigid blasts yesterday morning caused the temperature to plunge to nine degrees above zero in Cumberland, the lowest point it has reached this month.

The coldest point was Big Savage mountain where the reading was five below zero. Zero prevailed at Frostburg and in the Oakland-Terra Alta area but the mercury plunged to two below at Thomas, W. Va., and four below at Deal, Pa., on the Western Maryland railway.

Last midnight the temperature here was sixteen degrees above zero.

FOUR MEN ENLIST IN COMPANY D

Four men were accepted for enlistment in Company D, Maryland State Guard, here last night, according to Lieut. Anthony J. Monahan, commander. Six more enlistments may be accepted to bring the company up to full strength, the commanding officer stated.

Those accepted for enlistment are Charles William Couter, 257 Williams street; Robert Habig Herboldsheim, 638 Fairview avenue; James Edward Mellon, 122 Thomas street and Richard Alexander Reid, 5 Grand avenue.

The new recruits were examined by Capt. J. K. Rozum, local physician and met all physical requirements. Terms of enlistment are for one year.

Commenting upon vacancies in the local guard unit Lieut. Monahan said that citizens of good character and reputation between the ages of 18 and 51 will be accepted for service. The guard units drill for two hours each Wednesday night and advancement is rapid, because of the large number of men entering regular military service.

Nursery Serves 3,242 Meals to 137 Children In Past Three Months

One hundred and thirty-seven children were fed and 3,242 meals were served during the final quarter of 1942, according to a report read yesterday at a meeting of the board of directors of the Keating Memorial Day Nursery Baltimore avenue.

Forty-one children were fed in October, forty-nine in November and forty-seven in December. Thirty-nine are receiving meals at the nursery this month.

A total of 1,621 days' care was given children for the final quarter, the report showed.

Harold E. Naughton, chairman of the board, presided at the meeting.

Seniors Subject to Military Service To Be Graduated

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20.—(P)—The state board of education announced today it had approved a plan to award diplomas to 18-year-old High School seniors subject to military service before the second semester begins Feb. 1.

Selective service headquarters said that seniors reaching their eighteenth birthday before and on Feb. 1 would be subject to call at the discretion of draft boards.

Dr. Thomas G. Pullen, Jr., state superintendent of schools, said the plan provides that a diploma would be granted if the pupil has exhausted all chances of deferment until graduation, and if his academic record was of such calibre to prove that he would have graduated.

High School seniors who reach their eighteenth birthdays after Feb. 1, however, can be deferred until graduation as specified by the selective service ruling. Dr. Pullen said the state department of education requested the national selective service board to defer seniors who became eighteen in the first semester, but that the request was denied.

Dashiell Is on Committee

E. A. Dashiell, local dairy manager, was named a member of the local food committee to investigate shortages in this area. His name was inadvertently omitted from an article appearing yesterday morning which carried the other committee members' names.

Two Births Reported

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Parsons, 414 Arch street, announce the birth of a son last night in Memorial hospital.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Murphy, 412 Grand avenue, Tuesday night in Memorial hospital.

Driver Is Fined

Clarence U. Llewellyn, Rawlings, was fined $5 and costs yesterday in trial magistrates' court on a charge of exceeding thirty miles an hour on Route 40 in LaVale. Trooper M. F. Beamer made the arrest.

Two Men Fined $100

Yost W. King and Lanis Jones, who pleaded guilty yesterday in circuit court to a charge of selling alcoholic beverages to a minor, were fined $100 and costs. They were indicted by the January grand jury.

Bonus Scheme Is Branded Unfair

THE BONUS DISTRIBUTION PART of the effort in Governor O'Connor's budget to hang to the spoils of excessive taxation and divide them around in administration circles, come hell and high water, is sharply criticized by the Baltimore Sun, and for good reasons, even though it has leaned backward trying to justify the budget in the main, albeit in doing so it exhibited visible signs of strain.

This scheme, it says, "proposes to give state employees and teachers a bonus, payable in the immediate future, and then to forget the problem," which the Sun believes is quite unfair.

"The impropriety of such a course," it explains, "is emphasized in the case of the state employees by the fact that a new standardized salary schedule for all state offices will take effect on July 1. Many salaries will remain unchanged; hence employees who are in this category will receive a bonus now and have nothing to look forward to for the remainder of the year. If there could be a surer way to induce people to leave the state's employment after July 1, we cannot think of it."

"The same considerations apply in the case of the teachers, except that they get no revised salary scale. There is in their case the added fact that they are not employees of the state at all. On the contrary, they are county and city employees. Yet the state is apparently setting out to give them a bonus without requiring any contribution from those governing bodies to which the teachers look for their regular compensation."

The temporary makeshift, it says, does not meet the problem of higher living costs, the Sun holds, because this problem is a continuing thing, which will endure as long as the war goes on.

The Sun is correct in declaring that this whole bonus scheme should be carefully reviewed by the governor and the General Assembly.

Federal Power and State Projects

THE NEWS recently commended Governor O'Connor for his utterances on state rights, and noted the need for avoiding federal entanglement with domination of federal power coming through grants, subsidies and handouts.

An instance, which is but one of many, has been afforded by a dispatch from Washington reporting that the proposal of the Maryland State Roads Commission to build a toll bridge across the Baltimore harbor had been approved by Thomas H. MacDonald, head of the federal Roads Bureau.

Under the commission's plan, the bridge, costing approximately $12,000,000, would be paid for out of toll charges and the approaches would be paid for by the state and federal governments. The proposed span would link Canton and Fairfield.

The plans for the bridge, however, were subjected to three provisions: that the city Plan commission of Baltimore give its approval, that the War department grant a permit and that construction be delayed until after the war.

The city Plan commission opposed the bridge some time ago. Under the provisions of the city charter, no public structure can be built without commission approval.

All of this is in line with wartime considerations and, be it said, with city charter requirements. But the federal power is there and it probably could be exercised in such a project in peacetime even to the point of absolute veto if some arbitrary federal official or bureau should see fit to interpose it.

An Old China Bowl In the Kitchen

THERE'S AN OLD CHINA BOWL out in the kitchen. It's one of those cheap white crocks, shaped in profile like a capital U and about quart size, costing perhaps ten cents when it was new, commonplace, prosaic, an ordinary every-day utensil.

Objectively, it's really ugly now. There's a long dark crack down the side, there's a piece the size of a nickel knocked from the edge, there are two or three small chipped places and the periphery is not a true circle, the thing having been a bit too soft or having been pressed slightly out of shape when it was set in the kiln.

Probably this bowl should long since have been thrown into the ash can. Often it has been condemned to such fate, but as often there has been a hesitancy about it and so it has remained along with the other crocks, bowls and containers.

Why that hesitancy, each time, when more attractive and shapely containers are so easily and cheaply available? The answer lies in a single but meaningful word—memories.

The bowl is thirty-odd years old now. It was one of a collection of kitchen utensils carefully selected by a blushing bride and her proud young husband when they set out, frugally and hopefully, upon their wonderful adventure of establishing a household with glowing expectations and soaring ambitions in a world shining brightly with opportunity for the future.

From that happy day on down through the passing years, this lowly, commonplace bowl has served the family dutifully, faithfully and well. If only it could speak, it could tell volumes of the varied and useful services it has performed, of multitudinous phases of life, of the hunger it has helped to satisfy, of the illnesses it has helped to allay, of the joys to which it has contributed in the making of candies and other sweets. Its help has been to old and young, to relatives and friends, sometimes to the weary and hapless strangers who have appeared forlornly and wistfully at the back door. It helped to rear and satisfy the children as they came—Mother remembers fondly when one of the babies battered the edge with a spoon and knocked off that big chip—and now it is doing duty on occasions for the first grandchild.

Yes, memories have kept this dilapidated old bowl from the ash can. They have kept a few other things now doing less or no service around the house. They have kept some other things in the family, too, particularly hope and faith in a world that at times seems such a discouraging place until these reminders take one's fancy a swift flight over the years and call forth scenes and images and associations which brighten the darkness and lift the fading spirit.

Some day the old bowl will finally break and will have to go. But when it does, something will go out of the household that, despite its ordinary quality, cannot be replaced.

Those Unauthorized Strike Agitators

DISCHARGE of eight Detroit war workers at the army's request for agitating unauthorized strikes may indicate a growing government policy of dealing severely with those saboteurs of war production. It is a policy that can stand considerable development.

Col. George E. Strong, chief of plant protection for the army air forces, said the eight workers were definitely responsible for a series of wildcat strikes at the Bohn Aluminum and Brass Corporation plant in Detroit. The strikes were staged to protest delay in War Labor Board approval of a wage increase agreement between the company and the CIO United Auto Workers.

The army action in causing the discharge of the eight ringleaders is punishment for their harmful activities. Twelve other workers implicated in the strikes were allowed to go back to their jobs on their promises not to impede the war effort in any way. Production at the plant has been uninterrupted since December 13.

What the army did at the Bohn plant didn't prevent the unauthorized strikes of last month, but it brought the strikes home to the instigators in very convincing fashion. Repetition of such tactics, or even the threat of them, may prove an effective deterrent in other cases.

And if the army can take such measures in strikes involving military contracts, the government can take them in strikes which in any way affect war production. The situation has reached a point where a determined, uniform government policy of strike prevention is a vital necessity. Seizure of plants the owners of which are in no manner responsible for the suspension of production is exactly what these troublemakers want. They feel that if they work for the government they will do still less work for still higher pay.

It's difficult to make the New Deal realize that a lame duck doesn't necessarily make a good public servant.

Taxpayers are beginning to ask the location of all first-aid stations.

Who Is Your Friend?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Who is your friend? . . . He is that man who makes you do what you can.

Who is your friend? . . . She is that woman who forces you to be better than you were.

That is your friend. . . . Your friend wakes, stirs, stimulates, drives, persuades, rebukes, challenges the energies within you. . . . Your friend brings out the best of you. That is your friend's business. It is your business as his friend.

None other can be or is your friend. . . . Only that one.

Your friend does not nag with words. He does not sneer. He does not dominate. But because he is your friend, standing close within the circle of your nature, he makes you do what you can. And you may not betray that expectancy, that faith that is in his eyes when he looks at you.

A father, a mother, a brother, a sister, even a son or a daughter may be that friend. A wife or a husband may be the friend who will not let you be to less than your best. . . . You may be loved without that deep understanding of what you are and what you can become, but you cannot thus be befriended.

The friend looks within you and says: "You are loafing, you are cheating, you are letting yourself go to pieces. There are rich qualities within you and you are allowing them to gather dust. You are not using yourself. You are wasting life and you must not. We are here for such a little while and for all we poor mortals know we may never have another chance to rise or to fall, to dream or to dare." . . . In your friend's eyes is this reproach, this challenge.

He does not say, "You have failed ME!" Rather, he says you are failing yourself. You are not doing what you can, you are obeying only your lesser appetites. So your friend asks you for your own sake to live as you know you were meant to live.

Union Rebellion Against Heads Is Believed Growing

By MARK SULLIVAN

In the anthracite coal strike are two issues, strangely assorted. One is of a usual type—a demand by workers upon employers, for higher wages.

The other issue is rare, but of a type likely to increase. It is a resistance by workers against the head of their own union.

The union head, Mr. John L. Lewis, decrees an increase of dues. The workers resist the increase. Now the union in the present case is one which practices the "closed shop." This means that no one can work in the mines unless he is a union member. This puts the worker at the mercy of the union and its leader. The leader has only to notify the employer that the worker has not paid his dues. Thereupon the employer must discharge the worker.

This condition of the anthracite strike, and its dual nature—against the employers and also against the union head—touches a large portion of the whole field of labor and labor organization. Actually the situation, taken in connection with other conditions, compels the government and the people to face practically all the problems centering about labor organization. One of these problems is, should labor relations in war time have been fixed by law, by act of Congress—or left in the hands of the president and his appointees. On this question light is thrown by a bit of recent history.

Labor Bill Suspended

In December 1941—after Mr. John L. Lewis had led a strike in the bituminous coal mines, after the country and Congress had been stirred by that and other strikes, and after the House had passed, by a 2 to 1 vote, a bill covering labor relations—after that, members of President Roosevelt's administration asked senators to suspend this bill and several other pending ones dealing with labor. The reason given was that the president had a plan of his own for handling labor relations. In response to the plea, action on all labor measures was suspended, and was never renewed.

As the first step in the President's plan, he summoned what he called a "Wartime Labor Industry Conference." It was made up of two labor leaders—six from CIO, six from AFL. The president asked this evenly divided body to agree upon a plan for wartime labor relations. About this conference, it is important to bear in mind that it had no standing or authority whatever in law—it was merely twenty-four men called together by the president. It was an informal preliminary build-up for what the president intended to do.

Agreement Imposed

The two groups composing the conference were able to agree on all points—except one. While all agreed that a body be set up by the president to handle labor disputes, the industry members at all times took the ground that disputes having to do with the "closed shop" should not be subject to arbitration.

After the conference had disagreed on this point for several days, President Roosevelt in effect imposed an agreement upon them. The agreement imposed by the president was adverse to industry, for it made no mention of the "closed shop" which meant that the closed shop should be submitted to arbitration the same as other disputes. Ordinarily the industry members might have declined to accept the president's agreement. But we had recently entered the war—the date was December 23, 1941. There was a general disposition to give the president a free hand. In this spirit the industry members accepted what the president imposed.

Promises Not Binding

The president's agreement was brief—just three points: (1) There shall be no strikes or lockouts, (2) All disputes shall be settled by arbitration.

That is your friend. . . . Your friend wakes, stirs, stimulates, drives, persuades, rebukes, challenges the energies within you. . . . Your friend brings out the best of you. That is your friend's business. It is your business as his friend.

None other can be or is your friend. . . . Only that one.

Your friend does not nag with words. He does not sneer. He does not dominate. But because he is your friend, standing close within the circle of your nature, he makes you do what you can. And you may not betray that expectancy, that faith that is in his eyes when he looks at you.

A father, a mother, a brother, a sister, even a son or a daughter may be that friend. A wife or a husband may be the friend who will not let you be to less than your best. . . . You may be loved without that deep understanding of what you are and what you can become, but you cannot thus be befriended.

The friend looks within you and says: "You are loafing, you are cheating, you are letting yourself go to pieces. There are rich qualities within you and you are allowing them to gather dust. You are not using yourself. You are wasting life and you must not. We are here for such a little while and for all we poor mortals know we may never have another chance to rise or to fall, to dream or to dare." . . . In your friend's eyes is this reproach, this challenge.

He does not say, "You have failed ME!" Rather, he says you are failing yourself. You are not doing what you can, you are obeying only your lesser appetites. So your friend asks you for your own sake to live as you know you were meant to live.

SAP GATHERING TIME

Arrests and Seizure of Ration Cards Are Not Lawful, David Lawrence Says

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The average citizen in his desire to co-operate with the war effort is taking a good deal on the chin. He is obeying government edicts on the theory that they are lawful or that someone in Washington has looked up the law and found authority for administering punishment if "regulations" are violated.

As a matter of fact, there exists scant authority for some of the high-handed punishments being meted out to the citizen nowadays.

Thus the OPA thinks it can over night issue a ban on so-called "pleasure" driving and arrest a citizen and take away his ration book.

This is equivalent to denying transportation facilities to a citizen on the ground that he has violated the law. To mete out such a severe punishment is to introduce a penalty which Congress—supposedly the law-making body—never prescribed.

There is plenty of law permitting the OPA to issue or withhold ration books but this does not mean it can act capriciously or that it can suddenly decide that it will forbid "pleasure" driving and that it can make its own definition of what the term means.

Principle Well Grooved

The principle that no executive agency can impose a penalty unless it is specified in the law itself is well grooved. In fact, the attorney general of the United States, on June 21, 1934—under the present administration—ruled that no executive order could of itself prescribe penalties. And the attorney general stated that the broad general provision usually contained in all statutes—vesting authority "to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this title and by virtue of other authority conferred by the act"—does not cover the imposition of new penalties.

"The general power," wrote the attorney general, "to make regulations to carry into effect any particular statute does not carry with it the power to create offenses or to assess penalties for violations of the statute (U.S. vs. Eator) an executive officer cannot, by his regulations alter or amend a law. All he can do is to regulate the mode of proceeding to carry into effect what congress has enacted (Morrill vs. Jones). Penalties are purely the creatures of the legislature. They cannot be created by judicial implication, but must be expressly imposed by statute (The Board of Health vs. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company—California; The Western Union vs. Jones—Indiana; Health Department vs. Knoll—New York)."

Applies to Income Decree

It is obvious that the above reasoning applies also to the recently announced decree by the executive whereby net incomes were limited and the surplus was ordered retained by the Treasury, even though Congress had passed no revenue law stipulating such a rate of taxation.

The whole theory of government in America has been that Congress made the laws and that the executive agencies merely executed those statutes. It has always been assumed that Congress would not write into the statutes all the details but would leave these to the enforcement body. But until recently it never was assumed that the executive agencies would undertake to impose new penalties or to derive meanings from the statute virtually amounting to the same thing as passing new legislation.

In countries where parliamentary governments exist, as in Canada and Great Britain, the executive agencies are held strictly accountable for what they do, because if they err in the interpretation of an act of parliament, the party in power can be turned out of office because of the facts of the administrative officials. The executive and legislative departments are one and the same thing.

Penalties for Officials

In America, however, there is no way to hold executive agencies responsible for violating the spirit or the letter of the laws of Congress. Once in a while, as a result of public furor, a top official resigns but the damage he does cannot be undone and the violations of law cannot thus be prevented.

If the abuse of power grows, it may be necessary for Congress to do a little bit of penalty-imposing so that administrative officers who are found guilty of straying beyond the letter of statutes will be subject to fines and imprisonment or other penalties when they disregard acts of Congress or seek to deprive the citizen of his rights or property without proceeding through a lawful process.

Congress, of course, has all the power to stop the abuse of the citizen's rights, and the imposing of penalties through executive order or regulations might well become a subject of further inquiry if the representative system of government is to be maintained.

They Can Take It

From the Pittsburgh Press

In a palatial home in Washington lives a tall Englishman of austere appearance whose heart, we know, is heavy today. He is Edward Frederick Lindley Wood, Viscount Halifax, the Ambassador of Great Britain.

To Lord and Lady Halifax last week-end, came word that their youngest son, Lieutenant Richard Frederick Wood, had suffered injuries which made necessary the amputation of both his legs as a result of an enemy bombing attack on a base in Libya. Less than three months ago their second son, Captain Peter Wood, was killed in action in Egypt. Their eldest son, Charles Ingram Courtenay Wood, also is in Egypt, in the British army.

Much has been said—though too much never can be said—of the calm courage with which the people of England have met the hazards and sacrifices of war. American sympathy will go out to their representative, twice touched by personal sorrow in so short a time, and with it American admiration for what he typifies—the fortitude, the uncompromising ability to take punishment, the fighting spirit of our magnificent British allies.

Morning Motto

The intellect of man sits enthroned visibly upon his forehead and in his eye; and the heart of man is written upon his countenance.—LONGFELLOW

My informants swear this is true, and I will retell it, because it should be even if it isn't.

When Brig. Gen. Somervell, chief of army supply and the father of the lavish $70,000,000 palace of the War department across the Potomac river, was public works administrator in New York, he was called before a congressional committee.

A congressman accused him of being a Communist for indiscriminately feeding loafers at government expense, and made Gen. Somervell so angry that when he left the stand, he went to a hardware store and bought a screw and a nut which he carefully wrapped in a package and mailed to the congressman with his card.

The other day, Gen. Somervell's mail contained a package returning the screw and nut with a letter from the congressman, which is supposed to have read somewhat like this:

"I have just spent the day travelling around your body and I think these should be returned to you."

Demoralization Is Detected in Nazi Army in Russia

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Signs of a great demoralization in the German army are becoming apparent all along the Russian front.

There is just a chance, about a one-to-five wager—make it no larger than that yet—that Hitler will have to draw his armies all the way back into the Ukraine and perhaps out of Russia altogether.

The story behind the lifting of the siege of Leningrad is the same as that of Stalingrad and the South Caucasus. It is a tale of the hardships of an army trying to spend a second winter in a strange land of unbelievable cold, snow, and ice, facing a relentless foe able to take advantage of conditions terrifying to strangers.

The Reds launched excellent attacks to relieve Leningrad last summer and they tried again last fall. These lasted for weeks. There was nothing particularly new in the strategy or mechanical deployments to make their current one successful in seven days, except the greatly weakened morale of the German army.

Shown Elsewhere

The same weakness was simultaneously shown in the Nazi loss of Millerovo and Kamenek, where the Russians actually claimed to have crossed the Donets river. That river is an excellent defensive German position and the line on which Hitler was supposed to make his stand.

If the Russians establish themselves on the west bank in any force, the Nazis will have to look far behind them for another good stopping place.

These signs that the German fighting spirit is waning at last, may be subject to dangerous over-interpretation. No one can safely guess yet whether the cracking morale will widen and accelerate sufficiently to complete the collapse of German resistance. Too much depends on the unknown factor of Russian offensive power.

But the crack is evident now and all eyes here are glued on it.

Tripoli Best Prize

At every point where the British expect Rommel to make a stand, he has employed his troops, as if to fight strongly, and then sneaked away as soon as the British moved up their heavy forces for the assault. This he did at El Agheila, the Wadi-Zemzem ravine and now at Mizurata.

The expectation here is that he will establish himself on the line of Homs where a mountain range runs back from the sea in a south-westerly direction, protecting Tripoli.

But that mountain range is steep on the side toward Tripoli. The approaches from the British side are gradual and, therefore, the range is not as good a defensive position as some that Rommel already has passed.

But if he does not put up a real fight for Tripoli and attempts to escape along the coast into Tunisia, he will have given us the best prize of the African front since Ben-gazi.

Tripoli is an excellent port. It can be swiftly cleaned of wreckage, and the British can use it as well as the several superior airfields surrounding it, for the final closing in on the Axis forces in Tunisia.

Suicidal Plan

Some amateur strategists think Rommel may cut straight west through Tunisia and attempt to fall on our flank and rear. Military men discount the possibility as suicidal, would have the British Eighth army in his rear, constantly harassing his line of supplies.

Another current idea is that the Americans might organize an expedition to occupy Sicily and cut off the German line of supplies, instead of fighting in Tunisia, but this would hardly work, as long as the Nazis have airfields in Tunisia, Italy and Sardinia which could maintain an air supremacy over our landing parties.

So it looks like the expected close-grip tussle for Tunisia must be followed through on orthodox lines.

Screw and Nut Return

My informants swear this is true, and I will retell it, because it should be even if it isn't.

When Brig. Gen. Somervell, chief of army supply and the father of the lavish $70,000,000 palace of the War department across the Potomac river, was public works administrator in New York, he was called before a congressional committee.

The other day, Gen. Somervell's mail contained a package returning the screw and nut with a letter from the congressman, which is supposed to have read somewhat like this:

"I have just spent the day travelling around your body and I think these should be returned to you."

Grandmother Can Spoil the Baby, Doctor Declares

Youngsters Must Get Along without Constant Attention

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

"My baby is ten and one-half months old," a letter states. She eats and sleeps well. I take her to our family physician every six weeks for check up.

"We have to live with my mother-in-law because she is partly crippled and it is impossible for her to earn any income or live alone. She loves the baby so much that she sits by her and plays with her from the time she wakes up until she goes to bed at night and although this is very convenient at times, there are other times when I feel this is the root of the problem I have.

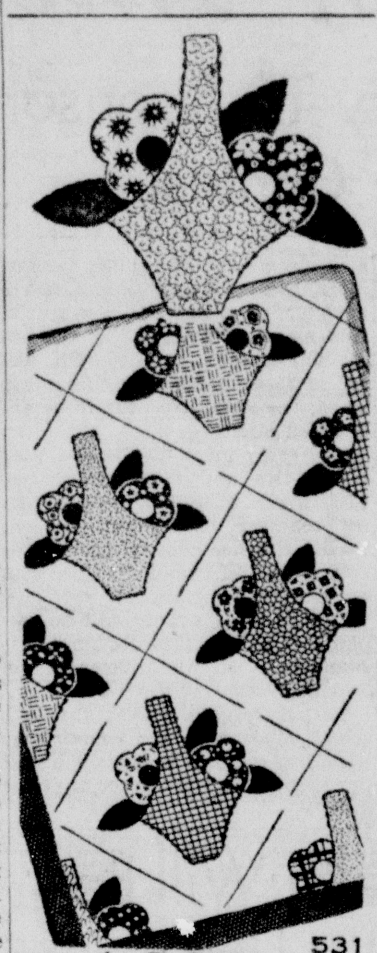

"My baby cries if some one is not with her constantly except when she goes to bed at night. When Grandma goes visiting I get aggravated because I have work to do and can't amuse the baby. When she is in her play pen some one has to be right in the same room. Even though she can see me and grandma in the doorway of the next room, she cries and carries on terribly.

"If she is in her buggy and I just walk back of it, she cries hard. If I walk out of her sight even for two minutes, she cries. If I put her on the floor and sit in a chair and want to read the paper, she cries. If I put her by the window and some one is not with her she cries. When I have been alone I have tried letting her cry it out but she'll cry for an hour and a half before she gets tired of crying.

Worse with Age
"If I could get the cooperation of my mother-in-law, is there a way of breaking the baby of this? I feel that the older she gets the worse she will be. Will you please give me some advice? I am sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"One thing I learned from your column. My baby cried at night when I put her to bed from 3 months old to 8½ months. I made sure she needed nothing, was not ill or uncomfortable and then I let her cry herself to sleep. Now I have no more trouble. The baby lies quiet in her bed, talks and drops off to sleep. Not one night does she cry."

The Doctor's Advice
As I wrote this mother the best thing would be for her family to move away from the grandmother's home, provided proper care for her could be provided. The next best thing is for grandmother to change her ways toward the baby, keeping away from the baby most of the time.

Provided you can manage the grandmother, making very clear to her what she must or must not do, your first step will be to have the baby gradually get along without constant attention. Make out a schedule which you will post in easy sight. On it provide at first for periods of ten minutes during which time neither you nor anyone else will go to her but will go wherever your work leads you. Let her cry. Then spend about three minutes amusing her, after which she will be left alone with some toys to manipulate, for another ten minutes. Having adapted herself to this, lengthen the period to twelve or fifteen minutes. Later make this period still longer. If you will follow your schedule to the letter, this baby will soon learn that you do not obey her cries, as she found when you trained her at bedtime so successfully.

Don't let the Gremlins sabotage your battery!

BATTY BEN:
"I'll pump out a little water—YOU cut down the charge a bit. Then come the next cold morning, This guy's only car'll QUIT!"

SNEAKY:
"Yeh-an' he won't know what's comin'! Till the bus don't START no more He FORGETS war drivin's DIFFERENT From the kind he's done before!"

Here's all it takes to keep your battery safe!

It is your wartime duty to take special care of your battery. With driving curtailed, the automatic recharge can't do its usual job. More batteries are going to quit than ever before. But this need not happen to you. Here is a list of the things to do to help keep your car alive! . . .

1. At night, start engine with your lights off. At all times, hold clutch pedal down when you press starter.
2. Don't leave radio or unnecessary lights on when engine is stopped.
3. Have the water level inspected and battery tested regularly. If your battery is too far gone to take a recharge, replace it with a new Atlas battery while new ones are still available.
4. Be sure you have easy-flowing Esso winter lubricants in crankcase and transmission.
5. Have your Esso Dealer check the charging rate of your generator. Probably it can be stepped up for winter driving.

6. Keep battery terminals and connections clean and free of corrosion.
7. Clean, properly adjusted ignition points and spark plugs make a big difference.
8. Watch for weak-battery signals! If engine turns too slowly when you press starter . . . if lights go dim . . . your battery needs immediate attention.

IMPORTANT: A weak battery is not only a nuisance, but also wastes gasoline. To guard against inconvenience and also to stretch your gas rations, put the care of your battery into the hands of your Esso Dealer right now!

Demonstration on Preparing Box Lunches Will Be Presented

"Packaged Health" will be the subject of the next Health for Victory Club meeting of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company, Miss Christine Ruehl, home service advisor of the Potomac Edison company, announced yesterday.

The meeting will be held at 2:30 o'clock January 27 at the Queen City hotel, with Miss Ruehl conducting the demonstration.

Miss Ruehl said the demonstration will deal with lunch box meals. It is particularly timely now, she said, because thousands of people are carrying lunches who never did before. What a good lunch is and what it should contain, how to pack them with the least trouble, what men and women like best in lunches will be included in the demonstration.

In addition, particular attention will be paid to feeding a family at all hours, when the men and women are on different shifts.

Miss Ruehl stresses the importance of the next Health for Victory club meeting, because it is keyed so closely to the problems of the home arising from the nation's war effort.

Meal planning guides for the month of February will be distributed to all members attending the next meeting.

Dr. Logan Clendening Attempts To Adjust Biochemics to Nature

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
One of my correspondents takes exception to an answer I gave the other day when I was asked whether an egg white is effective in relieving a tired and worn-out feeling, because it has been said that raw eggs destroy vitamins. My answer was that eggs themselves are full of vitamins.

My correspondent points out that biochemists have shown that there is an "egg white injury factor" and that biotin has a strong affinity for raw egg white. She says that dieticians were informed by a biochemist that they should tell their class and patient that raw egg white can keep the body from absorbing biotin and that, therefore, raw egg white is not good as such, but should be cooked.

I am glad to make this letter public, although I have considerable reservations about the whole subject of the egg white injury factor and also about the great powers of biotin. Biotin is a growth stimulating vitamin; its physiologic activity has been investigated mostly in the lower forms of plant and animal life.

Experiments with Rats As to the egg white injury factor, experiments have suggested, that when rats are kept on a diet containing uncooked egg white, they develop a characteristic syndrome known as "egg white injury." Continued feeding of this diet results in the death of the animal. It has been indicated that the injury produced is not due to the action of the egg white, but results from an interaction of a protein present in egg white with the biotin of the diet. As a result the biotin is rendered unavailable to the animal and a biotin deficiency results, producing the typical "egg-white injury syndrome."

This is all very well, but as I recently pointed out to a doctor, the human body is capable of a good many things which you wouldn't guess if you were just reading a single article in the Journal of Biological Chemistry. This particular doctor was worried about some patients who had continued fever and who had not been able to eat very much for several weeks. He thought they must be just full of vitamin deficiencies and that their blood wouldn't coagulate. But it just so happened that they were not full of vitamin deficiencies and their blood did coagulate.

Potency of Biotin One biochemist stated that biotin is so powerful in its effects on life that it is felt in such minute amounts has one part in 500,000,000,000. Yet it can't overcome a little egg white?

Regarding egg white injury, there is one question I would like the biochemists to explain: before a chicken is hatched, it is in a state in which it is saturated with raw egg white. In fact, that is about the only kind of protein it gets. and a I would like to see a new-born chicken suffering from the egg white injury syndrome. Also, weasels and others of that family, such as skunks, suck raw eggs a good deal, but I never heard of one with egg white injury. My acquaintance with skunks has impressed me with their insouciance and complete lack of vitamin deficiency.

Understand, I am not copping; just trying to adjust biochemics to nature. General Pershing said to some young officers, "If the landscape does not agree with the map you have drawn of it, consider the possibility that the landscape is correct."

Questions and Answers

J. J. H.: Is insulin a cure for diabetes? Some people say it is a cure and others say emphatically there is no cure for diabetes.

Answer: The word "cure" means complete recovery due to the use of a certain remedy. In this sense insulin does not cure diabetes, nor does anything else. But insulin holds diabetes in control so that the dangerous condition of coma does not come on and nutrition is kept at a good level. For all practical purposes the diabetic taking insulin and a proper diet is just the same as a normal person.

Rifle Course Will Be Given at State
Teachers CollegeHarry Morgan Will Conduct Classes on Mondays
and Thursdays

FROSTBURG, Jan. 20.—Students of Frostburg State Teachers college will be given an opportunity to receive rifle marksmanship training under a nation-wide program sponsored by the National Rifle Association in co-operation with the War department, Miss R. Youne Zenn, member of the rifle club announced today.

The instruction methods and equipment to be used by the local club will follow closely those recommended by the NRA for all of the small arms firing schools throughout the country under its direction and are in line with the small arm training methods of the army and marine corps.

With both time and the amount of ammunition available for training purposes at a premium, recruits already trained in marksmanship lighten considerably the burden on military instructors and may be called upon to assist in instruction of other recruits.

The school will be conducted with military type 22 caliber rifles using ammunition released for this purpose by the government. Harry Morgan pointed out, this type of arm is being used for basic training by all the services and that the fundamentals learned with the bolt action 22 can be applied immediately to any other gun including the service Garand and Springfield.

Under preliminary plans the local school will consist of two sessions held Mondays at 4:30 p. m. and Thursdays of each week at 7:30 to 9 p. m.

The assurance that school work will be handled by competent instructors can be given following NRA approval of Harry Morgan, as Chief Instructor with Miss R. Youne Zenn assisting.

46 Are Enrolled

An enrollment of approximately forty-six students, many of them future army inductees are studying the rudiments of rifle marksmanship here.

This instruction course will cover the following basic subjects:

Nomenclature of rifle and cartridge, to give the students a general knowledge of the important working parts of any military-type rifle they might use; safety, to show guns can be handled with no chance of an accident; shooting positions and the use of the rifle sling, teaching approved military positions and how to make best possible use of any terrain; sighting and aiming; trigger release; and sight adjustment. All successful graduates will be awarded certificates from the association indicating they have completed the course. All the women will compete in the William Randolph Hearst Junior Rifle Trophy Championship.

Townspeople interested in coming to class may enroll in the Thursday evening session at the college.

Cites Cadet Requirements

Joseph Montana, chairman of the War Committee of the Frostburg Elks, reported at the lodge meeting last evening that he has been receiving inquiries about aviation cadet training. He said he received information from the United States Aviation Cadet Examining Board, Baltimore, that aviation cadet training is available to any soldier who can meet the requirements.

The requirements for air crews are as follows:

Applicant must be within the ages of eighteen and twenty-seven years. He must pass the mental test, pass the physical examination and be accepted by the board.

Men interested in aviation cadet training, Montana informed the lodge, must apply to local Draft Boards for immediate voluntary induction.

CHAPTER FORTY-EIGHT
WHEN THE opportunity did present itself for Abby and Paige to return to Honolulu, it was by Clipper. As they hurriedly packed light baggage, in answer to a quick call, Paige remarked, "I hope my luck holds, at least until we take off. I have seen Eugenia but that one time, and that's been at least three weeks."

"And you won't," Abby stole a second from her work. "I had what is known as 'words' with Eugenia. I'm the only person who can call me homely and get by with it. San Francisco wasn't big enough for the two of us—I pointed out to her." The white-haired woman smoothed the hips of her zebra-striped silk dress with motions as savage as her attack on the blond girl, then returned to the battle of stuffing too many clothes into one bag.

"Soon she put on a brown Alaska seal coat over the ferocity of her zebra dress. Paige was elbowing her way into the gray-striped topcoat that matched her suit, the same traveling outfit she had worn when leaving with Rusty on the Mazatlan.

"Paige," blurted Abby, "I've said it before and I'm saying it again, for the last time, 'You don't HAVE to go with me.'"

"You need someone with you." To lessen the anxiety in the little woman's faded eyes the girl added, "Besides, I want to go—it'll be such fun to see Rusty. I want to watch him squirm." Abby Tyson made no answer.

It was difficult to believe, even when the Clipper was traveling very, very gently upward, that they were on their way to Honolulu. The place seemed isolated, inaccessible by what it had endured.

Gradually Abby began to lean back from her decidedly uncomfortable perch on the edge of her seat. "I wish I could decide if I like it up here. I'll admit the water doesn't seem so cold and wet from this height."

"That's right," agreed Paige. She chuckled. "And there is another advantage. If you're so scared you sleep in your clothes tonight, it will be for only one night instead of four as it was on the Lorelei. Pierre wouldn't have to go through so many fits."

For several minutes Abby was quiet except for her jaws, busy with chewing gum. Finally she said, "I wonder how soon we get fed?"

Paige laughed aloud. "You're beginning to like it here, Abby."

Restwick Carnes was flying also, in a private plane. The one he kept at his Kaneohe place. The one he had kept in the city had gone up in flames as the military planes had.

"Not that you would be allowed to fly even if he had not been destroyed," he had been told. "The armed forces must not be confused unnecessarily by unknown planes."

All the same, Rusty was in the air, for the first time since that fateful December 7. And it was glorious to be flying. That is, flying as he was, strictly for pleasure. It was glorious also, to be defying orders. They even wanted to take the sky away from him.

He intended to enjoy this freedom to the utmost. That was what flying should be. Freedom. Not a stilted martial pattern of many planes bent upon destruction. It was an escape, a place to go when you wanted to be even more important than Restwick Carnes III. It was where you went when you wanted to feel you owned the world. You could look down and see so much of it. That was the way Rusty felt about flying.

He headed higher into the sky, did several sharp turns, and then some dips, just to prove he really could fly. The trouble was, a guy like General Clemmons could make a young fellow wonder about himself. Rusty didn't like that. He increased his speed and climbed still higher. He began to circle, around and around, over his and Abby Tyson's plantations.

Yes, Restwick Carnes intended to enjoy this ride. He had had a hard time getting up. The plantation runway had been clogged with weeds and flowers and vines. All that interference had to be cleared and by only one boy. Other boys had been assigned temporarily to war duties. Just another example, Rusty thought furiously, of the accursed war ruining his life.

He turned his ship and flew toward the Pali. The wind, treacherous enough when one was on the ground, was even more dangerous in a plane. Rusty felt the little ship's body toss as if it were made of paper. He leaned to one side to peer down at that steep mountain and into the rocky wet valley below it. If a plane fell there it would be the same as dropping an egg into a rock garden. Suddenly he wondered into what sort of place Denison's plane had fallen.

The thought made him shiver. He remembered also standing at Eugenia's hotel windows after she had told him of Paige's past, remembered also, watching the planes out over the harbor. He remembered his certainty that Paige's Denison had fallen purposefully; he remembered how intensely he had understood a man taking that way out if confronted with such a sorrow now. The situation was reversed. His Eugenia was the wicked one, wicked with a wickedness that chilled the blood.

Restwick Carnes' lungs gasped for air. He realized he had been holding his breath for several seconds. The palms, even the back of his hands, were wet. He felt as if something verminous were crawling along his spine. Fighting the battering wind, he noed his little ship toward its home hangar.

Choppo's joyous yell greeted him when he landed before the plantation hangar. The youngster came running across the grass-covered field.

"Take me up this time, Rusty. Take me. Will you, huh?"

The man's hand clutched the thatch of hair on Choppo's head so tightly that, for a second, tears were hard to control, but Choppo managed. The gaze he lifted to Restwick Carnes was dry. He did not repeat his pleading to be taken up. He just trailed at the man's feet, into the wide laza, across the living room, on into a library where Rusty sat down behind an enormous desk.

He spoke to the child. "Choppo, I have something very important to do. I want you to pack some clothes and go with the houseboy to Denison Ware's." His voice was less strong. "I know how much you like Denison."

The boy's expression was a mixture of anticipation and dutiful loyalty. "Oh, I do, Rusty. I always have fun with him, but I wouldn't—gee, Rusty, I don't wanna leave you. You might need me."

"Not right now. Run along, Choppo. Pack your riding clothes. And hurry, because as soon as you've gone I have to go up again." He listened to the boy's footsteps across the floor. They made tapping sounds up the stairs.

Restwick Carnes reached for a shot-glass and poured himself a straight drink of Bourbon. He changed his mind and poured into a highball glass, then picked up the bottle and added to it until the glass was three-fourths full. He filled it with plain water. He was glad he hadn't had a drink earlier in the day. There was something too warm and wonderful about a first drink. This was the moment for it.

He drank as if he were drinking water. A second time he filled his glass in the same manner. This time he walked to a mirror and looked at himself. Those sapphire-blue eyes were half frightened, half determined. The whiskey rolled around his heart in a devil-may-care warmth that comforted.

"Small detail!" muttered Restwick Carnes III, and drained his glass.

The Clipper landing was a matter of closed windows and many soldiers standing nearby. The days of leis and music were gone. Abby's chauffeur, in answer to her cable, was there. Not with her large limousine, but with a tiny coupe.

"Even so, madame, we're apt to have to get out and push—gas rationing, you know."

Abby Tyson paid little attention. She was too busy searching the crowd. "Where is Choppo?" And then she saw Denison Ware, standing beside his station wagon.

"Where is Choppo?" she demanded of him. Her voice was alarmed.

He dashed toward her and gripped her arm. "Choppo is with me. He—" His dark eyes darted to Paige's face, tried to find the answer to a question not even worded. "Abby, Rusty went up in his plane yesterday. He had an accident."

"But Rusty is a wonderful pilot! He wouldn't have an—" And then she knew. "Oh, Denison—oh, poor little Choppo!"

They both swerved to watch Paige. The girl walked to the small coupe and got in. Abby caught her chauffeur's eye and gestured to Denison Ware's station wagon. She climbed in beside Denison and they headed toward Kaneohe. Neither spoke for many minutes.

Finally Denison said, "Abby, Choppo thinks Rusty was doing something for the Army."

"I'll remember," the little woman said.

"And, Abby—" the dark-haired man reached over to grasp the hand that trembled like a leaf. "Children forget."

Abby was motionless for an instant and then she returned the touch of Denison Ware's hand. She even managed to turn and look at him with her brimming eyes.

"I know, dear. And," she consoled, "so do adults. So will Paige. She's not grieving because of love. It's a grief born of decency and a generous heart—just be patient, Denison. Just be patient."

"Casablanca" Opens At Strand on Friday

Casablanca, the city that flashed into the news as part of the bold and brilliant American invasion of North Africa, splashes boldly and brilliantly on to the screen of the Strand theater Friday when Warner Brothers' "Casablanca" opens.

It was sound military tactics that took a place name like Casablanca out of the geography books and put it in headlines, but it is thorough, sound showmanship that makes the screenplay "Casablanca" a vivid and exciting adventure.

For one thing, the picture moves with the same speed and directions as did the A.E.F. in Africa. And you need a Humphrey Bogart to set such a pace. As "Rick" he's a tough guy again, but a right guy. He can take care of himself any place, any time and in any company.

Simone Simon Stars In Liberty Thriller

Medieval writers told many tales of werewolves and persons who had the power of transforming themselves into various animals. One of these legends, a Balkan story of women who become giant cats, is the basis of RKO Radio's latest film, "Cat People" now at the Liberty theater. Simone Simon has the leading role.

Terror and romance vie with one another in RKO's new thrill-film "Cat People." Simone Simon, Kent Smith, Jane Randolph and Tom Conway head the cast of this strange tale of black magic in Manhattan.

Brent, Cabot Stage Long-Awaited Bout

People still talk of the longest recorded fight—between John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain many years ago. Their bout went seventy-five rounds.

"CASABLANCA" A SMASHING SUCCESS

Paul Henreid and Ingrid Bergman, co-workers in Europe's underground, and Humphrey Bogart, who aids them, drink a toast to victory in this scene from Warner Brothers' "Casablanca," opening Friday at the Strand.

of 1870 which is currently appearing at the Maryland theater through United Artists release, has in it love, high-stake gambling, lavish settings—and a fastidiously that can outdo even the Sullivan fight.

George Brent, hero of the film, and Bruce Cabot, villain, pounded each other for several days before the cameras. They were battling for the love of Priscilla Lane, blonde heroine who plays the title role. Brent won not only the fight but the Silver Queen, but not before he and Cabot exchanged some high-power he-man socks.

Bobby Jordan Was "Angel," but Not Long

Bobby Jordan, "angel" of the Dead End Kids, and "holy terror" of the studios, has certainly changed since that period in his life—he was 4 years old—when he was a cherubic laddie who modeled for ads of little boys' clothing. "Aw, shucks," says Bobby of that period, "a fella isn't responsible for what his parents make him do."

Bobby's a long ways away from those Eton jackets and choir collars. Today, he's garbed in overalls or pants bagging at the knees, with broken-visored caps, sometimes covering his long hair, and shoes capable of smashing in a rib or two if he cares to swing them hard enough. In Columbia's "Junior Army," now at the Embassy theater with Freddie Bartholomew, Billy Halop and Huntz Hall, Bobby plays a wild boy of the road, a fist-battered vagrant.

COMING SOON, ARABIAN NIGHTS

Dear Friend:

We take great pride in calling to your attention the forthcoming engagement of one of the season's finest motion pictures, CASABLANCA.

With one of the greatest casts ever assembled in one picture, CASABLANCA brings to our screen such favorites as Paul Henreid, the exciting, new, romantic star who scored so heavily in NOW, VOYAGER; Ingrid Bergman, the beautiful young star who has won millions of admirers in her screen portrayals; Humphrey Bogart, in his most dynamic role; Claude Rains, Conrad Veidt and Sidney Greenstreet.

Woven around the love of Paul Henreid and Humphrey Bogart for Ingrid Bergman is a story of suspense, intrigue and excitement that, for sheer entertainment, stands head and shoulders above the top attractions of this new season.

You can't help but get a thrill from the emotional impact of the tender love scenes between Henreid and Bergman and Bogart and Bergman. The intensely vital problem that faces Miss Bergman, when she tries to decide between the love she has for Humphrey Bogart and her love for her patriot husband Paul Henreid, will bind you in a spell of entrancement.

In it is the story of CASABLANCA, the city that seethes with intrigue as the stopping off place for French refugees, trying to get visas to Lisbon. You can't help but feel the excitement that pervades the action and there are moments where your emotions are so touched that you will want to get up and sing the Marseilles.

All in all, CASABLANCA promises to be one of the finest films of 1943. It has already been hailed as such by many of the nation's leading film critics. We heartily endorse it and urge you to attend the engagement which opens at the Strand Theatre tomorrow.

Sincerely,
F. K. O'Kelly.

LaSalle Easily Defeats Piedmont, 48 to 26

Blue and Gold Cagers Extend Victory Streak

Geatz, with 19 Points, Leads Explorers to Tenth Win

PIEDMONT, W. Va., Jan. 20.—The LaSalle High Explorers, of Cumberland, Md., playing one of their best games of the season, easily defeated Coach William "Huck" Miers' Piedmont high terrors here tonight, 48-26, to sweep the home-and-home series.

The Explorers, in racking up their tenth straight victory of the season, set the scoring pace throughout, counting the first points of the contest a few seconds after the opening whistle. In the words of Piedmont Coach Miers, "LaSalle was just too good for us and looked like a team of professionals."

The Marylanders, who swamped Piedmont 52-29 at Cumberland, lost no time in going to work. At the end of the first quarter, Piedmont trailed 13-3 while an even second period drew to a close with the Explorers on top 21-11. After three quarters, the figures stood LaSalle 33, Piedmont 20.

Miers, after finding the visitors much too hot to handle, substituted freely. Coach Art Slocum sent two LaSalle teams into the fray but none of the substitutes contributed to the scoring.

Pacing the Explorers, as usual, was lanky George Geatz, who found the hoops for nineteen points on eight field goals and three of five fouls. Ray Schmutz, long shot specialist, dropped in five baskets while Bobby Stakem, in addition to turning in his usual stellar floor game, gathered ten markers.

"Wig" Pratt, Piedmont forward, accounted for more than half of his team's counters, ringing up fourteen points on four fielders and six of seven free throws. The lineups:

Davis Again Tops Parsons Panthers

Wildcats Register Third Straight Win over Tucker Rivals

DAVIS, W. Va., Jan. 20.—The Davis High Wildcats, leading in the three-cornered series for the Tucker county scholastic basketball championship, shook a four-game losing streak here tonight to defeat the Parsons High Panthers for the third straight time this season. The score was 38 to 21.

The Wildcats, who bested the Panthers by a single point in the first meeting and by four markers in the second clash, had things almost all their own way in the third game of the four-game series. Davis piled up an 11-8 lead in the first period and then proceeded to blank the Panthers in the second round for a 24-8 advantage at the half-way mark. The third quarter drew to a close with Parsons trailing 33-16.

Walt Woyick was high scorer for the Wildcats with eleven points on five baskets and a free throw while Wallace Bennett snared four of Parsons' nine double-doubles. The lineups:

Baugh Is Cleared By Elmer Layden

Commissioner Says Redskins' Star "May Have Been Careless"

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 (AP)—Sammy Baugh, the Washington Redskins' famed passing star, today was officially cleared of everything but "carelessness" by Elmer Layden, commissioner of the National Football League, for failure to appear with other Redskins in the service benefit game with the All-Stars at Philadelphia Dec. 27.

Layden, in a formal 300 word statement, declared that investigation had proved conclusively that Baugh intended to play; that he was really ill when he intended leaving his Rotan, Texas, home for Philadelphia, and that at the most "he (Baugh) may have been careless in delegating the duty of notifying the club officials."

Layden added that "the publicity and subsequent investigation attendant upon Baugh's failure to appear in Philadelphia is deemed sufficient punishment under the circumstances."

Goldberg Shares Lead in Scoring

Loyola Star Ties Oberhaus of Baltimore U. in State Race

By FRED STABLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

By scoring thirteen points against Johns Hopkins Tuesday night, Loyola's Barney Goldberg pulled into a first place tie with Paul (Nails) Oberhaus, of Baltimore university, in the state collegiate basketball individual scoring race.

Both men registered 104 points in games played up until yesterday (Wed). Each had the same number of two-pointers, forty-five, and the same number of foul conversions, fourteen.

Oberhaus, however, produced his total in only six games, while Goldberg played in ten.

In third place, thirteen points back of the leaders, was Franny Bock, of Loyola who headed the chase last week with eighty points. He came through with only eleven points in three games.

Ernie Travis, rangy Maryland guard, came from nowhere to take over fourth place, rolling in sixty-two points in four games.

Washington college's Frank Samuels, who last week was in a second place tie with Goldberg, was idle and dropped to fifth place.

Travis also took over leadership in free-throw tossing, running his total to nineteen during his four-game scoring spurt.

All-Star Game Set for July 13 At Philadelphia

League Presidents Meet To Adjust Schedules To Fit Dates

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (AP)—Meeting to adjust the major league baseball schedules to fit the new opening and closing dates set recently, Ford Frick, president of the National League, and William Hargrave, president of the American League, today agreed on Tuesday, July 13, for the All-Star game at Philadelphia.

This was exactly a week later than the date previously set for the eleventh annual dream game, which will be played at Shibe Park under the sponsorship of the Philadelphia Athletics of the American League.

The re-scheduling of the All-Star game was perhaps the easiest task that came before Hargrave and Frick, who were called upon to improve new features into this year's program in order to save transportation.

They were unable to complete all the details at today's session, but they estimated that major league transportation this year, including the revised spring training, would be reduced five million-man miles.

The two leagues will open their schedules on Wednesday, April 21, and close Sunday, October 3.

The Washington Senators, however, will be hosts to the Philadelphia Athletics at Griffith stadium on Tuesday, April 20, following the usual pattern of having a special opening game at the nation's capital every second year. Opening games on April 21 will be:

American League

Washington at New York.
Boston at Philadelphia.
Chicago at St. Louis.
Detroit at Cleveland.

National League

New York at Brooklyn.
Philadelphia at Boston.
St. Louis at Cincinnati.
Pittsburgh at Chicago.

The teams that start away from home will have their "second opening" on Tuesday, April 27, in the National League and either Monday or Tuesday in the American League. Pairings for these games will be:

American League

New York at Boston.
Philadelphia at Washington.
Cleveland at Chicago.
St. Louis at Detroit.

National League

Boston at New York.
Brooklyn at Philadelphia.
Cincinnati at Pittsburgh.
Chicago at St. Louis.

No team will make more than three trips into any other city in the league. The leagues will have in-

New Yorkers Will Remain at Asbury Park until April 8

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (AP)—The New York Yankees will open their training camp at Asbury Park, N. J., March 21, just a month before the start of the American League season, President Ed Barrow announced today. They will remain there only three weeks, breaking camp April 8 and moving into New York for nine exhibition games against the Brooklyn Dodgers, Boston Braves and New York Giants.

The Yankees will start training about a week later than their two New York rivals, the Giants and Dodgers, who plan to open their camps at Lakewood, N. J., and Bear Mountain, N. Y., on March 15.

Garden Becomes Capital of Cage Game in March

NCAA, National Invitation Tourneys Will Be Held There

By ORLO ROBERTSON

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (AP)—Madison Square Garden, where all attendance records for basketball have been smashed, will become the capital of the cage game in March when the pick of the nation's college fives appear in the NCAA and national invitation tournaments.

Harold Olsen of Ohio State, chairman of the NCAA Basketball committee, today announced that the organization's eastern regional tournament and national finals will be held in the huge Eighth avenue sports arena, where a record crowd of 18,394 saw a college doubleheader January 2.

Red Cross Program Planned

The invitation tournament, sponsored by the local colleges, will match selected teams on March 16, 18, 22 and 24. In addition a Red Cross benefit program also is being arranged to fit in with the invitation meet.

Definite dates for the NCAA's two tournaments and its western sectional meet at Kansas City will not be decided until some time next month, but Olsen indicated they probably would be held the third and fourth week-ends of March. That plan would fit in with the invitation tournament since it would call for the four NCAA fives to play probably March 19 and 20, with the winner going against the western sectional survivor on March 27.

Mountaineers Won in '42

Such a set-up also would permit eastern teams to compete in both tournaments, if they so desired. The NCAA competition divides the country into two sections with four selected fives from each district competing in the sectional tournaments.

Last year Dartmouth won the eastern tournament and Stanford the western, with the West Coast team going on to take the championship.

West Virginia university won the invitation tourney, defeating Western Kentucky in the finals.

wartime manpower problems, had this cautious comment to make about the Boston Braves' release of Paul Waner and John Cooney, two of the National League's oldest outfielders.

"Some of us may need men like them before the approaching war season is over," he said.

Maroon Marksmen Alone for Cagers

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 (AP)—The basketball team at the University of Chicago has set a new Western Conference record for consecutive league defeats—thirty-four—but the school's got some sharpshooters in one athletic department—the rifle team.

The Maroon marksmen have won twenty-seven consecutive team victories, their latest victory a 907-752 win over the Commonwealth Edison five-man team. Hugh Bennett, one of the Maroons, was eagle eye in the match, scoring 187 of a possible 200 shots.

Bramham

Net Loss Not Too Great

"Even upon that more than liberal calculation there would be available for 1943 operations for sixteen leagues 210 more players than their club player limits would permit them to carry on their active lists."

Bramham said that the 2,431 total of players that are listed as having been placed on the national defense and voluntarily retired lists since October 1, 1940, include many who already were inactive, suspended or ineligible and therefore that the net loss because of the war actually has not been this great.

He said he could not predict what government regulations would be in effect in the matter of transportation or otherwise and that the various presidents were just as competent to judge eventualities as anyone else.

But he concluded, "there is no more reason why the obstacles cannot be overcome in the minors so as to permit operations than there is in the majors."

percentage of poor weather dates the league has encountered in the last decade.

The problem of transportation is not expected to work any insurmountable hardship on National League teams, whose new schedule will be drawn on the same lines as that of 1942, when a great many passenger miles were eliminated voluntarily by a rearrangement of dates.

FROSTBURG, Jan. 20 — With Charles Oglebay and "Dutch" Blank leading an attack that produced twenty-nine field goals, the Frostburg State College Jayvees overwhelmed Bruce high cagers, of Westernport, 65-25, here tonight to sweep the home-and-home series. Frostburg won at Westernport, 35-28.

The Jayvees set the pace all the way, leading 13-4 at the quarter and 28-12 at the half. In the third chapter, the locals cut the cords for twenty-four points for a 52-21 margin going into the closing stanza.

Oglebay and Blank each gathered twenty points with the former caging nine fielders and Blank eight. Cueva, who sparked the Bruce offense, had nineteen markers on eight of his team's eleven double-deckers and three free throws. The lineups:

Maryland Tracks Hope To Continue

Representatives of Four Ovals Discuss Transfer of Meets

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20 (AP)—Representatives of Maryland's four major race tracks, meeting today, agreed that racing in Maryland should be continued in 1943, provided it does not interfere with the war effort.

They agreed also that the flat daily license fee paid the state by the tracks should be changed to a percentage tax.

The Baltimore Sun said it understood that the representatives of the tracks—Bowie, Havre de Grace, Laurel and Pimlico—also considered transferring meetings from the outlying ovals to the more centrally located Pimlico plant.

Such a move would be agreeable, the newspaper said, provided the managements would not have to meet Pimlico's $3,000 per-racing day tax levied by Baltimore county under an old agreement.

No details of the proposed racing tax law changes were released by the group after the meeting.

At present a $6,000 daily license fee is levied by the state against each track for each day of racing. The state also receives two per cent of all money which passes through pari-mutuel windows.

Representatives of the tracks said they expected to confer with the Maryland Racing Commission to discuss the whole situation in detail and agree on legislation to help the tracks.

TIMIDITY NOT CAUTION
IT IS ALL right to be cautious and endeavor to avoid over-bidding. But timidity is not caution, and under-bidding is not conservatism in rubber bridge. The way that the scoring of the game is adjusted, it pays you in the long run to have your unmakeable game contracts outnumber your less-than-game contracts on deals which can produce a game. That may sound a little involved, but think it over. The point is that it pays you so much more to score a game that you can afford to take some risk.

East 1 3 South 1 2 West 3 4 North 3 4 Pass

What is wrong with that picture? Quite clearly something is, as East was set two tricks, with one in spades and two each in the minors, without even being doubled. Assuredly he "got off light." Both North and South blamed each other for not getting to the spade game which could be made with the loss of one trick in each suit outside of trumps. South insisted that, after he had bid undressed to the level of three—a reaching out for nine tricks without ever hearing from his partner—North should have called 4-Spades on his last turn instead of passing.

Back came North with the assertion that South was at fault, and should have bid 2-Spades on his first overall instead of a minimum 1-Spade. That, he said, would have told him the story and made it easy for him to reach the game.

When they could not settle this, a kibitzer was asked his opinion. He suggested a double of 1-Heart. That would have made possible several things—a business pass if North was loaded with hearts, a No Trump if he had a few honors, including heart stoppers, and in any event South could bid his spades later if necessary.

Albert Trout, Jr., Is Convicted of Statutory Rape

Sentence Will Be Passed This Morning; Jury Deliberates Two Hours

Albert Vernon Trout, Jr., 27-year-old soldier, was convicted of statutory rape last night by a jury in circuit court which deliberated for two hours. The maximum penalty is death.

Associate Judge William A. Huster said last night that sentence will be passed this morning. Trout was charged with having sexual relations with a 13-year-old South Cumberland girl when she was only 12 years old. The girl later gave birth to a son.

The girl, dressed in a yellow sweater and a plaid skirt, calmly told the jury that the relations took place with the soldier with her full consent. Under Maryland law the age of consent is fourteen years. The child was born on October 16, 1942 exactly two months before the girl reached her thirteenth birthday.

Trout denied that he was in Cumberland at the time the alleged relations took place. He told the jury he was staying at the Gospel Mission in Washington, D. C. When cross examined by Morgan C. Harris, state's attorney, Trout said he could not remember the address of the mission but that a "Mr. Smith" was in charge. He added that he had stayed there for two and a half weeks.

Testimony of four youths placed Trout in Cumberland and at the home where the alleged rape took place. Trout's father and stepmother both said he had been in Cumberland. The stepmother said he stayed home practically all the time but the father said he had been out several times during his stay here.

The girl told the court that Trout was with her twice in a room at the home but at the time she did not know his name. When she gave birth to a child at a local hospital county authorities became interested and subsequent investigation implicated Trout. The girl also described how Trout was dressed at the time.

She testified he wore high top boots, breeches and a red and black hunter's cap when he came to the home. The four youths also said Trout was dressed in that outfit.

Trout sat at the counsel table with his wife and Estel C. Kelley, attorney, appointed by the court to defend him. He wore the khaki uniform of a soldier and did not show any emotion with the exception that he lunged forward in his chair and muttered when Harris declared that he was "a disgrace to the uniform he wore."

Defendant Was A. W. O. L.

Harris, in his argument to the jury, said he was shocked by the case and that it was reminiscent of stories emanating from the hill country of some Southern states but that here in Allegany county such things were not common place. Harris asked the jury for a verdict of guilty so that the dignity of the state and sanctity of the home could be respected by all law-abiding citizens. "We must see to it that all 'wolves' of this type are warned that we are determined to protect our homes and our children," Harris told the jury.

Trout was AWOL from his post at the time the alleged rape took place, Harris said. He also said it was only one of several times that Trout had been AWOL.

Associate Judges William A. Huster and Joseph D. Misch, Hagerstown, were on the bench during the case. Judge Misch instructed the jury as to the three counts contained in the indictment against Trout just before the jury retired to deliberate the case.

Plans for Door-to-Door Canvass Will Be Completed Saturday

Local 1874, TWUA, Praises Meyers

Union Head Will Enter Army Soon; Leadership Extolled

The general committee of Local 1874 Textile Workers Union of America at a meeting last night adopted a resolution expressing its appreciation for the constant and effective leadership of the retiring president of the local, George A. Meyers, who will leave next week for induction as a private into the United States Army.

The resolution praises Meyers for his constant and effective leadership and states that the committee believes the future will rate the past two years (during which Meyers was president of the local) as outstanding in accomplishment and as a preparation for events to come.

Meyers was commended for his close adherence to, and loyal support of the National CIO objectives and for his achievements in state and national affairs. "We feel that his great leadership has been largely responsible for the high esteem in which our local is now held by labor, government and the general public," the resolution added.

The committee also voted to deposit $5,000 of Local 1874's funds in the Celanese Federal Credit Union from which members of the union can make loans to take care of their 1942 income tax. Boyd Payton, vice president of the local recommended such action which was passed unanimously by the general committee. Payton said workers desiring further information on the loan plan should contact the union office.

Plane Spotters Urgently Needed, Sloan Declares

Shortage of Volunteers Is Acute, Chief Observer Advises Lions

Urgent and immediate need for additional volunteers for airplane spotters posts near Cumberland was emphasized yesterday by Alex Sloan, chief observer of the Maryland Aeronautics Administration, at the regular weekly luncheon of the Cumberland Lions Club in the Central Y.M.C.A.

Sloan pointed out that by charting airplanes that pass over this section air spotters help protect the rest of the country and not necessarily this locality. On the other hand, spotters to the east chart planes and thus help to give ample warning to this region in event enemy aircraft should happen to make an appearance, the speaker declared.

The shortage of volunteers is so acute at present, Sloan said, that a number of women and boys have been recruited to help keep the posts in operation twenty-four hours a day.

In describing the routine Sloan said that the hours are short, the time is generally inconvenient and the job is generally a thankless one, yet a patriotic duty in the present emergency.

A token was presented by the club to Ray J. Anschbach, a member, scheduled to leave next week for induction in the armed services.

The Rev. Charles M. LeFevre and John G. Wiebel, new members, were inducted at a ceremony in charge of John K. Snyder, past president.

Cigars were passed around by Chester Coughenour, who is celebrating the recent arrival of a baby in his family.

Tech. Sgt. Wilbur L. Hudson, of New Hampshire avenue, stationed at the Army Training College, Washington, D. C., and Herbert Taggart, of Upper Montclair, N. J., representative of the Bear Brand Hosiery Company, were guests of the club.

Cumberland Scout Qualifies for Air Scouting Honors

Jerry Swan Becomes First Candidate for Two-Blade Propellor Badge

Air scouting, a new program, has been inaugurated by Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America, and the first tenderfoot air scout candidate to qualify for a two-blade propellor badge is Jerry Swan, of Troop No. 13, sponsored by the First Presbyterian church, Washington street.

To qualify for this award Swan was required to present an acceptable model airplane which he has made and to submit a list of ten safety practices related to aviation.

Swan passed the test at a board of review held at Boy Scout headquarters at which Charles Nield was chairman and Edward Shuck, Harold E. Messman, Jr., and Homer Carey were assistants.

Air scouting is a brother scout program to sea scouting and explorer training. By meeting certain simple requirements and earning certain merit badges any scout may become air scout candidate and earn his propellors.

Others qualifying for merit badges include: James Hinkle, of Troop 12, Kingsley Methodist church, Second class; Harry Thayer, of Troop 13, Second class; Robert Carter and Donald Hoyle, of Troop 2, Baltimore and Ohio Y.M.C.A., reading and handicrafts.

Plans are under way to present the awards at a special Court of Honor during Boy Scout anniversary week, February 6 to 12.

Heskett Confers With Legislators, On Bond Bill

Members of the Allegany county delegation to the general assembly will confer today with Charles Z. Heskett, city attorney and airport director, concerning a bill authorizing Cumberland to issue $150,000 in bonds so that money will be available to complete the airport at Wiley Ford, W. Va.

The attorney took copies of the proposed bill with him along with photographs and other data on the field.

The city is continuing attempts to get federal assistance from the Federal Works Agency and the Civil Aeronautics Administration will issue bonds to raise funds only if these hopes fail to materialize.

Tin Can Salvage Collection Will Open Here Today

Trucks Will Make Pick-ups in Cumberland, LaVale on Two Days

Cumberland's tin can salvage collection campaign will be inaugurated today at 9 a. m. At the same hour the collection of tin cans will be started in LaVale.

Those residing north of Baltimore and Greene streets and Baltimore avenue, are urged to set out their old tin cans in containers on the curb this morning so that they may be picked up by city garbage trucks.

Tomorrow the trucks will visit the section south of Baltimore and Greene streets and Baltimore avenue, starting at 9 a. m.

In the LaVale section, cans will be collected today starting at 3 p. m., west of Cash Valley road, including Braddock road and Voeck drive. Commencing at 3 p. m., tomorrow the collection will be in the section east of Cash Valley road.

Emmett A. Dougherty, local garbage contractor, last evening stated that all paint, oil, varnish, floor polish or cone-shaped cans are not wanted for salvage. Evaporated or condensed milk cans also are not worth saving and should be put in with trash.

Food cans, tin-plated tobacco containers, coffee cans and others with painted-on labels are wanted. Householders are urged to wash cans thoroughly after emptying contents, remove paper labels, open cans, bottoms as well as tops, tuck in tops and bottoms and flatten cans by stepping on them. Basket, box or barrel are suitable containers.

Dougherty said that cans collected in Cumberland will be dumped into a car on a railroad siding in the rear of the Algonquin hotel.

Fuel Oil, Gasoline Burn in Railroad Wreck at Hancock

Western Maryland Tracks, Blocked Fourteen Hours, Are Reopened

Thousands of gallons of precious fuel oil and gasoline bound for the shortage-plagued Eastern Seaboard went up in flames yesterday when nine Western Maryland railway tank cars wrecked and burned at Round Top, about a mile west of Hancock.

Railroad officials estimated the loss at 48,000 gallons, or six cars, and the gasoline at 24,000 gallons, or three cars. No one was injured. Wreckage blocked the main line of the Western Maryland from about 7 a. m. yesterday when the accident occurred until 8:45 o'clock last night when the tracks were cleared and reopened to traffic.

The cars tore up 300 feet of track, destroyed two automatic signals and tore down telegraph wires and railroad telephone poles. While the main line was blocked Western Maryland traffic was detoured over the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, whose tracks parallel those of the Western Maryland's in that area.

Official explanation of the wreck, touching off a fierce fire which blazed for many hours afterward, was that the trucks of the thirty-fourth car of a 121-car train failed as it was passing through a switch. In all, eleven cars of the train that was made up in Cumberland and left here about 5:30 a. m. yesterday were derailed.

The company credited the quick work of crewmen and the efforts of asbestos-clad firefighters from Hancock with holding down the loss. The train included a number of other cars loaded with fuel oil and gasoline.

The scene of the wreck is inaccessible by road and the Hancock Fire Department sent in equipment by rail.

Leo Lania Will Explain Jewish Relief Friday

German Exile To Discuss Aid to Refugees of European Nations

The work of the Joint Distribution Committee, major American agency for aid to the Jews overseas, will be described Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock in B'er Chayim temple, by Leo Lania, prominent refugee author who witnessed the committee's activity in Europe.

Lania, who was a leading journalist in pre-Hitler Germany, went into voluntary exile in 1933. Before the fall of France he was a staff member of the French Propaganda Bureau, broadcasting in German territory. When France fell, he escaped through German lines and later escaped to the United States.

The meeting Friday night, according to Rabbi Aaron H. Lefkowitz, of B'er Chayim congregation, will be in the nature of a forum.

Commenting upon the activity of the Joint Distribution Committee, Rabbi Lefkowitz pointed out that the organization is continuing to give large-scale assistance to war victims and refugees in many parts of the world. Since Pearl Harbor he explained the organization has made possible the emigration of more than 7,700 people from Europe.

During 1942, the organization appropriated $7,250,000 to provide relief and rehabilitation to 795,000 persons all over the world.

Two Men Tumble Off Housetop, One Dies, Other Unhurt

William Morrison, Westernport, Succumbs from Skull Fracture

William Lawrence Morrison, 65, Westernport, died in Allegany hospital at 3:34 o'clock yesterday afternoon, two-and-one-half hours after he and his helper fell from the roof of a Davidson street dwelling where they were working.

Morrison's helper, Gorman Broadwater, about 40, also of Westernport, was not injured in the fall, according to W. H. Gayhart, who resides at the home, 322 Davidson street, with his father-in-law, William R. Smith.

Lands on Concrete Walk

The men were doing preliminary work prior to reroofing the house, Gayhart said, when both of them tumbled to the roof over the front porch, a distance of about twelve feet. Morrison rolled from the porch roof and landed on a concrete walk while Broadwater fell on the ground nearby.

Gayhart said he had been on the roof with the men but had gone into the house to get warm. Less than fifteen minutes after he left them, Gayhart continued, he heard the crash, ran outside and found both men unconscious. A roll of composition roofing material fell to the ground with them.

After he saw the condition of the men, Gayhart said he ran to Allegany hospital about three blocks away for assistance. Morrison was taken to the hospital in the Knight ambulance. Broadwater received attention from a physician.

Does Not Regain Consciousness

Dr. Linne H. Corson, deputy county medical examiner, said Morrison died from a fractured skull and did not regain consciousness. Dr. Corson gave a verdict of accidental death.

Morrison, a native of Burlington, W. Va., was a son of the late John W. and Julia Morrison. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Eva Ross Morrison, two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Conroy and Mrs. James Machin, both of Westernport; one son, Howard R. Morrison, Westernport; two sisters, Mrs. Mamie Holland, Baltimore; Mrs. Ora Markwood, Cumberland; three brothers, J. Fred Morrison, Burlington; Floyd L. Morrison, Washington, D. C.; and T. E. Morrison, Cumberland.

The body is at Knight's funeral home pending completion of funeral arrangements.

P. O. Elks.

Both speakers expressed the crying need for officer personnel in the navy and announced that they will conduct interviews at the Fort Cumberland hotel until Friday for all those interested.

REPORTS MUST BE MADE TO O.P.A. ON IDLE VEHICLES

Owners of commercial motor vehicles were reminded by the Office of Defense Transportation yesterday that all idle trucks, buses and other vehicles, except taxicabs, rental cars, ambulances and hearses must be reported to the ODT.

Reports should be made on ODT form GWN-3, single sheet form of eight questions which can be obtained from and should be returned to the vehicle owner's local ODT District Office.

Owners are required to list all commercial motor vehicles which were idle during the last 14 days of the month. The report should be filed within five days after the last day of the months covered by the form.

Commercial vehicle owners with no idle equipment are not required to submit a report. Purpose of the monthly report is to enable the ODT to determine what proportion of the nation's commercial motor vehicles are actually in use, and also how many trucks, and buses, are being unused and might be available for essential war or civilization work, the ODT said.

Two men left here yesterday for Fort George G. Meade to enter military service. Both of them had previously passed their final draft examinations. They are Comiles W. Bolin, a registrant of a North Carolina branch and William H. Stephens, negro, of Local Board No. 2.
